Tax Break Incentive Proposed For Farms In Preservation Programs

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

NINE POINTS (Lancaster Co.) — Congressmen who want to put farm economics into farmland preservation met at a Lancaster County dairy farm Monday morning to unveil a federal legislative effort called the Farmland Preservation Act.

Meeting at the family farm of Ed and Arlene Harnish, located just south of Nine Points, Congressman Joe Pitts (R-16), introduced the act he is sponsoring to eliminate estate taxes and capital gains taxes on a farm when the owner has entered into a covenant to preserve the land as farmland. Pitts was joined by former Congressman Bob Walker and other state legislators.

"For too long, farmers, both here and across the country, have been burdened with the fear that the farm on which many of them have grown up and worked their entire lives would not remain in their family after they are gone," Pitts said. "This fear stems from one of the most overburdening taxes laid upon hard working families and farmers and business owners. It is not right for the federal government to grow fat on taxes while family farms are sold to cover the estate tax."

Congressman Robert Walker, who retired last year after serving 20 years from the district now served by Pitts, had introduced similar legislation for the last six

"Foraging Around" Section In This Issue

Arden and Caroline Landis, dairy farmers from Kirkwood in Lancaster County, depend heavily on grassland to feed their 60 milk cows. Along with grazing the herd, Arden is on a program to make his farm organic-based. The Landis family's experiences are part of the special Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council's "Foraging Around" section in this issue.

Also in this grassland section, find research information for growing hay, information about the state hay show to be held at Ag Progress Days, Association news, a calendar of grassland events, and messages from our advertisers.

In addition, PFGC sponsors several awards to acknowledge outstanding performances by forage producers. You will want to check for information on how to reach Marvin Hall for details on these awards.

Delegates Vote To Change National Holstein Herdbook

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — Delegates to the 112th National Holstein Convention voted to change the Association's herdbook structure during the convention, held in Grand Rapids, Mich., June 25-28.

The new herdbook structure will contain the following four categories of Registered Holstein Ancestry (RHA), with each percentage rounded down to the nearest whole number.

100% RHA-NA — The "NA" stands for North American. These are animals whose entire ancestry can be traced to the origin of the U.S. or Canadian herdbook.

100% RHA-I — The "I" stands for International. These are animals whose entire ancestry can be traced to the origin of an approved foreign herdbook, or whose ancestry contains a combination of North American and such foreign lineage.

0-99% RHA-NA — Animals of entirely North American lineage whose ancestry cannot be traced to the origin of the U.S. or Canadian herdbook.

0-99% RHA—I — Animals of entirely or partly foreign lineage whose ancestry cannot be traced to the origin of the respective herdbook(s).

Extension Agent Appointed Ag Deputy Secretary

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Countians are still reeling from the news that Dr. Zoann Parker has been appointed deputy secretary for administration for the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

"Sure, she is well qualified and can do a great job, but what are we going to do without her?" were sentiments expressed again and again by those who work with Parker. She has led Lancaster 4-H Extension for more than a decade.

Under her tutelage, an embryology science program was developed that is now taught in all the county's school districts. About 5,000 youths participate in the county's 160 4-H clubs. Parker is the motivational force behind the more than 500 volunteers who assist in the clubs. In recent years, she has become known as the "ratite specialist," and has lectured extensively in North America, and coordinated marketing programs on an international level. In addition, she has worked as a resource person for the live market poultry industry in a three-state region—recently with haulers and producers during the avian influenza outbreak that is nettling county poultry producers.

Parker looks more like a fresh-faced youth comfortable in jeans and sneakers than a power-suited professional with degrees in agriculture education, economics, training and development, and a doctorate in vocational industrial education. But that youthful appearance doesn't fool those who know her well. She shoulders responsibility well. Energy, enthusiasm, and innovative ideas burst from Parker.

"Whatever job you give her, she goes in at 140 percent," said her boss, Dr. John Schwartz, county extension director.

While many countians were surprised by the appointment, none were more shocked than Parker, who said that she became aware that she was being considered for the post only four days before the announcement to the media.

"Never in my wildest dreams did I imagine this," Parker said. "I'm not politically active. I'm people and program oriented."

According to Parker, Agriculture Secretary Samuel E. Hayes Jr. wants PDA to move forward with problematic-oriented objectives and not a political agenda.

Hayes said, "Parker will bring energy, inventive thinking, organizational skills, and leadership talent to the position of deputy secretary. She has the academic preparation and real-world experience to help me establish 21st century programs for both the department and the agricultural community of Pennsylvania."

It is the first time that a woman will fill the ag deputy secretary post.

Parker is accustomed to being

National Grain Market

ST. JOSEPH, MO
JULY 9, 1997

Grain and soybean bids finished sharply higher after today's trading. Good export demand and outlook for all commodities, boosted bids. Fund buying on the board was also a strengthening factor for corn bids. Wheat 6 to 10 cents higher. Corn 5 to 10 cents higher. Sorghum 14 to 16 cents higher. Soybeans 19 to 26 cents higher. Sharply higher wheat bids was due to good overnight export sales by South Korea, however, indications that Egypt is seeking 750,000 to 1.5 Million tonnes of wheat for August and September delivery, added more support. Corn and soybean bids were also sharply higher with export orders the major supporter. Taiwan and South Korea bought a substantial amount of corn and some fund buying on the board, also pushed bids upward. The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

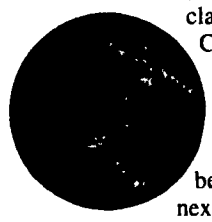
JULY 14-20, 1997

FULL BUCK MOON, JULY 19.

WHERE WERE YOU?

Where were you on July 20, 1969? Two men, Neil Armstrong and Edwin Aldrin Jr., were walking on the surface of the Moon. President Richard M. Nixon, in a moment of national pride, proclaimed it the greatest moment since Creation. The Apollo II mission had answered President John F. Kennedy's earlier State of the Union challenge, in 1961, to safely send a person to the Moon and back before the end of the decade. In the next Apollo landing (November 1969), Charles "Pete" Conrad Jr. referred to Neil Armstrong's statement, "That's one small step for [a] man, one giant leap for mankind," by saying, "Man, that may have been a small step for Neil, but that's a long one for me."



. . . nor other pilot need beside a magic wisp of moon.

– William A Percy

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Keep clothing sizes, social security numbers, and other vital statistics in your wallet or address book for quick access.

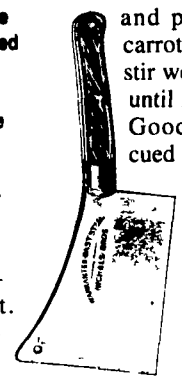
SWEET COLESLAW

4 cups shredded cabbage
1 medium carrot, shredded
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
4 teaspoons sweet pickle relish
1/4 cup mayonnaise
1 to 2 tablespoons sugar



Mix together cabbage and carrot. Combine the remaining ingredients and pour over the carrot and cabbage; stir well. Refrigerate until ready to serve. Good with barbecued meats.

Makes about 5 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

Beware of an oak, it draws the stroke (lightning); avoid an ash, it counts the flash; creep under the thorn, it can save you from harm.

One Saturday change in the Moon is enough, as it is always followed by a severe storm.

Corn fodder dry and crisp indicates fair weather; but damp and limp, rain.

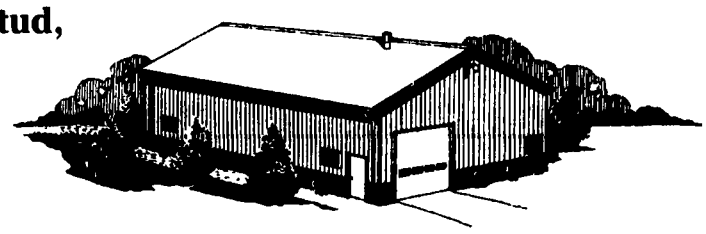
The Building you want.
The Lease you need.

Whether your new farm or commercial building is of pole, timber column, stud, steel or block construction; choose Telmark lease financing.



Telmark has been leasing equipment for over 30 years. Did you know that we've been leasing new buildings for that long too? Consider the features:

- Tax deductibility and accelerated write-offs: Lease payments are income tax deductible over the term of the lease compared to 20-year depreciation of farm buildings and 39-year depreciation of commercial buildings. Could reduce tax liability this year.
- Low upfront costs: Beginning costs may be as little as one monthly lease payment.
- Flexible lease term: Building lease terms start aggressively at five years but may be as long as ten, twelve, or fifteen years.
- Customized payment schedules: Lease payment schedules match your cash flow. Payment options include monthly, quarterly, annually, as well as, skip or specially designed seasonal payments.

How do you start leasing a building from Telmark? Talk with a qualified builder to determine your needs and building cost. And call your Telmark representative:

OPINION

Milk Is Mostly Fat Free

Last month the story got national coverage. Norman Mayo, 61, believes he might have avoided his health problems if he had been warned on milk cartons about fat and cholesterol. "I drank milk like some people drink bear or water," Mayo said. "I've always loved a nice cold glass of milk, and I've drunk a lot of it."

In a federal lawsuit, this self-described "milk-a-holic" named Safeway and the dairy farmers of Washington as defendants claiming that a lifetime of drinking whole milk contributed to his clogged arteries and minor stroke. He wants reimbursement of his medical expenses and unspecified compensation for personal injury. In addition, Mayo wants warning labels on all dairy products and advertising.

"It's my opinion that the dairy industry is to blame," Mayo said. "They push their dairy products without warning you of the hazards."

But no one must have told this man that even whole milk is between 96 and 97 percent fat free. So it must have been something else that caused his medical problems. Fortunatly, the media treated this as it should have been treated—without merit. And in the end, it gave dairy farmers the opportunity to extol the virtues of milk at least on local TV, radio, and newsprint.

And milk is not addictive. But those of us who have had the opportunity to down a cold glass of milk right out of the bulk tank might admit milk can be good enough to be addictive.

Now Is The Time

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Protect Dry Cows From Heat Stress

Glenn Shirk, Lancaster County extension dairy agent, reminds us that the hot, humid days of summer can cause severe stress to cows, especially high producing cows and cows making the transition from late pregnancy to early lactation.

Too often we limit our focus to reducing the stress to the lactating herd. Perhaps more important is the need to protect dry cows from heat stress. What happens to cows in the dry period has a very significant impact on how well they do in their next lactation.

One of the major goals in the weeks preceding and following calving is to encourage vigorous appetites. Cows that go off feed around calving time start mobilizing a lot of body fat, which may lead to fatty livers. That may trigger a lot of metabolic problems, including further depression of appetites, displaced abomasums, and ketosis.

Fatty livers also suppress the cow's immune system. This means she may become more susceptible to diseases and other infections. She also may respond poorly to treatment and recovery from these problems is delayed.

To Maintain High Dry Matter Intake

According to Glenn Shirk, Lancaster County extension dairy agent, if high dry matter intakes are maintained before and after calving, cows lose less flesh, have fewer health problems, milk better and breed back sooner.

One way to encourage higher dry matter intakes is to protect dry cows from stress. Ways to do this includes good ventilation, shade without mud, easy access to fresh, clean water and clean waterers, clean, dry and comfortable rest areas, well-balanced dry cow ration, fresh feed and clean mangers and a good preventive herd health program.

To Be Aware of Dry Soil Potassium Deficiency

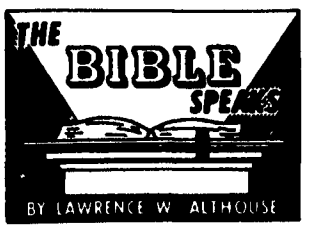
The past several weeks many people have reported seeing corn and other plants with bottom leaves which are yellowing along the margins and in some cases this has turned brown.

Yellowing begins at the leaf tip on lower leaves and extends back toward the stalk. Bottom leaves usually show the most severe symptoms and as you move up the plant, each leaf shows less.

According to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County extension agronomy agent, these symptoms are typical of potassium deficiency. These symptoms may occur even when soil levels of potassium are in the adequate or high levels on a soil test.

Potassium deficiency symptoms develop because plants cannot extract potassium from the dry soil. Adding additional potassium is not likely to change the situation. Taking a soil test will be helpful in determining if the soil is deficient or if the deficiency is due to weather. If the deficiency is due to dry soil conditions, the plant will usually recover as soon as a normal rainfall pattern returns. Plants will experience little or no loss in yields.

Feather Prof.'s Footnote: "Enthusiasm on fire is better than knowledge on ice."



ARE YOU A DOCETIST?

July 13, 1997

Background Scripture:
Hebrews 2
Devotional Reading:
Hebrews 10:1-10

In early Christianity Docetism was condemned as a heresy. But that certainly did not put a stop to it, for docetism is consciously or unwittingly embraced by many Christians today who think of themselves as being quite orthodox.

Docetism came into Christianity primarily through the agnostics, a group who were influential in Christian thought, particularly from the second to the fourth century A.D. Docetism comes from the Greek word dokein which is translated as "to appear" or "to seem." The agnostics believed that Jesus had no material essence, but just "appeared" or "seemed" in human form. The agnostics believed that physical form was evil. Thus, agnostics believed that Jesus was divine but not truly human.

In 326 A.D., repudiating docetism and other heretical interpretations, the Council of Nicea fashioned a creed which proclaimed: "We believe in one Lord, Jesus Christ, the only Son of God, eternally begotten of the Father, God from God ... of one being with the Father ... and became truly human..." The belief of the early church was thus balanced between the convictions that Jesus Christ was fullly divine and fully human. He did not just "appear" to be human.

100% Of Both

This does not mean that Christ was 50 percent human and 50 percent divine, but 100 percent of both. How can that be? It is a paradox: two seemingly contradictory realities held together in one person. Neither a mathematical equation nor a scientific formula, it is a human attempt to express a divine experience.

I have encountered many people who, although they have not called themselves 'docetists' — and wouldn't know the name if they heard it — understand Jesus Christ from a docetist perspective. They think of him as basically 'divine,' not really human. As they elevate his divinity, they denigrate our humanity. They put a chasm between Jesus and ourselves that makes him irrelevant and us hopeless.

The writer of Hebrews does not leave any room for a docetist Christ: "Therefore he had to be made like his brethren in every respect, so that he might become a merciful and faithful high priest in the service of God, to make expiation for the sins of the people" (2:17).

Flesh & Blood

Actually, a Christ who is not fully human — as well as divine — is of little value to us. If he doesn't know what it is to be a human being, to have the same limitations, and suffer the same temptations, we can easily dismiss him: 'Oh well, he's Jesus and we're us,' as if that lets us off the hook. But what Jesus was and taught is not beyond human experience. In a sense, Jesus came to be like us to that eventually we might be like him.

It also means that, quite contrary to the agnostic teachings, the physical form of humanity is not degrading. Jesus was not debased because he had a real physical body. "Since therefore the children share in flesh and blood, he likewise partook of the same nature..." (2:14).

What makes Jesus our Lord and Master is the fact that he knew what it meant to be human. "For because he himself has suffered and been tempted, he is able to help those who are tempted" (2:18). He is not saying that Jesus 'appeared' to be tempted, but that he actually was tempted.

Just as we are.

With The High Costs Of Dry Feeds... Look To Liquids...

Look to Pro-Lix®

- In the dairy business, income over feed cost is the name of the game. Pro-Lix liquid feed supplements offer dairymen the means to maximize this value while getting the most from their cow's natural abilities.
- Pro-Lix liquid feed supplements are concentrated sources of just what ordinary feeds lack: protein, energy, vitamins, minerals -- everything animals need for economical milk production and growth.
- For replacement heifers, Pro-Lix means faster maturity and assurance that they'll get to the milking herd on time. If you trust your heifers to forage alone, they might not make it.
- For lactating cows, the nitrogen content of Pro-Lix means plenty of protein available for milk production and growth.
- Finally, for dry cows, Pro-Lix not only helps maintain their health during the dry period it prepares them for the next lactation. The Ca:P ration in Pro-Lix helps control milk fever, while the Vitamin E and selenium aids in clean-up after the birth of a calf.

Best of all, Pro-Lix works with all types of pasture grass or forage, as a free-choice supplement, a top-dressing, or a ration mix.

The payoff is healthier animals and economical production, all year round!

(Reported from market conditions. Tuesday, July 8, 1997)

Lisa Wheeler

Bridge News, N.Y. - Rainfall in parts of the US Midwest this week has helped curb the recent losses in milk production that were linked to hot, steamy weather. The USDA announced that the June basic formula price (BFP) was $10.74/cwt, up 4c from May, but down $3.18 from June 1996's $13.92.

June's butterfat differential is $0.1140, while NASS's cheese price survey for a 40-pound block of cheddar is $1.1583 a pound.

Traders said they don't expect as strong of a pop-up in prices this summer as was seen in the previous summer.

The Dairy Division in USDA's AMS has decided to revise its procedure for computing the average cheese price used to compute the BFP. Effective with the June 1997 release, the current month's average will include all weekly cheese price information that has been released since the last BFP announcement, the USDA said.

Cheese price averages used to compute previous month BFP's will not be revised, it said.

Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman announced 1-year

A.I. Forces Cancellation Of Poultry Show

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Because of concerns related to the recent outbreaks of avian influenza (A.I.) on poultry farms and the quarantine established in northern Lancaster County, this year's Northeast Poultry Trade Show and Conference has been cancelled.

According to John Hoffman, executive director of the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation, the show, originally scheduled to run Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 24-25 at the Holiday Inn Lancaster Host, told Lancaster Farming on Thursday that the show has been cancelled.

However, the golf tournament scheduled for Tuesday, Sept. 23 is still on, noted Hoffman. The executive director of the Federation said the tournament will be used as a fund-raiser to defray costs and offset losses in revenue associated with the cancellation of the September trade show and conference.

There will be various hole sponsorships, from $250 to $1,000, along with a barbecue lunch and a reception in the evening.

Next year's trade show, scheduled Sept 23-24, 1998, "will be held," Hoffman said.

On Friday morning, a meeting of the Federation's Avian Influenza Committee was held at the Farm and Home Center, according to Hoffman, to cover topics such as biosecurity breaches, to review the information about the spread of A.I., and other vital matters to the control of the disease.

According to John Schwartz, Lancaster extension director, the 72,000-layer flock in the quarantine zone reported suspected with A.I. last week was officially confirmed positive this week. As of Friday morning, the flock was not destroyed, and discussions were continuing about its fate.

Inoculants, which are a combination of bacteria and a material to make them adhere to the seed, work on increasing the amount and mass of the nodules. The nodules are critical in nitrogen fixation. David Bitler examines the nodules on one plant.

Dr. Elwood Hatley, Penn State Department of Agronomy, center with dark cap, told 16 soybean producers and agri-industry representatives that a properly applied inoculant will help — with the right soil conditions — the plant to nodulate and increase the mass of the nodules.

Use Of Seed Treatment Depends On Frequency Of Soybean Planting

ANDY ANDREWS

FLEETWOOD (Berks Co.) — First-year soybean growers and those attempting up to five years of growing soybeans on the same fields would do well to triple-inoculate the seed before planting, according to an agronomist who spoke at a farm field day Wednesday.

Dr. Elwood Hatley, Penn State Department of Agronomy, told 16 soybean producers and agri-industry representatives that a properly applied inoculant will help — with the right soil conditions — the plant to nodulate and increase the mass of the nodules.

Hatley spoke at the David Bitler Vista Grande Farm in Fleetwood at a Penn State-sponsored soybean inoculant field day.

On hand were members of the Kutztown Young Farmers Association and several agri-industry representatives, as well as extension service.

Bitler, who also spoke at the field day, reviewed the five-acre soybean test plot. The plot was planted on May 19 on 14-inch rows using Dekalb 399. Minimum tillage and a single-disc drill were used. The plot was previously corn since 1994.

Bitler, who utilized the services of a Lancaster crop consultant, planted a total of 60 acres of soybeans out of 500 acres at his farm, including pasture land on his 100-cow registered Holstein dairy. Typical soybean yield, he indicated, is 45-50 bushels per acre.

According to Jon Stutzman, agronomist with Brubaker Agronomic Consulting Service who helped Bitler establish the soybean fields, the aim was to drill down 200,000 seeds per acre. Emergence was actually about 140,000 plants per acre.

At the Bitler five-acre test plots, there were four separate studies. One plot included a check, one included an all-liquid inoculant, another included a material combining a fungicide, inoculant, and molybdenum, and another a USDA peat-based inoculant.

The inoculants were mixed in the drill at planting time, according to Stutzman.

Soil fertility included a pH of 6.7 with a phosphorous reading of 198 and potassium of 545. The field receives cow manure annually.

Other factors, according to Elwood Hatley of Penn State, important for stand and nitrogen uptake include soil conditions at time of planting (growers should ensure the soil is not too cold and hard), soil pH, and weather. Bitler said he received, as of Wednesday, a little more than an inch of rain in the past week.

Often growers are hesitant to spend dollars on the triple inoculant, "but I believe in using triple inoculants in low pH situations," said Hatley.

With inoculants, which are basically bacteria in a medium that coats the seed, the plant has the potential to draw up the four pounds of nitrogen per bushel needed.

This year, some of the poor stand problems can be blamed on seed maggots. Many stand problems, the result of the long, cool spring this year, can be blamed on the maggots or fungus.

Without Bottle Bill, Fa
Cows Die, And P

Part 1 Of A Series

Editor's Note: Farmers are running out of patience. Every day without a Pennsylvania Bottle Bill means another day of picking up hazardous trash in the field, watching cows die from consuming the trash dumped on the acres farmers need to make their living, and worrying how much destruction of their equipment they can afford.

Part one of the Bottle Bill Series will look at the frustrations farmers have faced while lobbying for the statewide passage of a Bottle Bill. The bill is under consideration by the state legislature to place a deposit on aluminum and glass containers — the same containers that end up in fields, destroying equipment and livestock.

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

WOMELSDORF (Berks Co.) — Dairyman Roland Feeg reaches down to pick up an old fruit juice bottle covered with dirt, filled with some rain water, lying in the grass.

"I wish it would bounce back and hit them," he said, as he motions with the bottle to the cars that pass by his farm, often throwing trash directly into his hay field along Rt. 419 north of Womelsdorf.

Sharp edges of the smashed bottle could have ended up in the forage if Feeg didn't take precious time away from work to pick it up.

Beer cans are a real culprit. They can destroy knives on the forage harvesters. Like pieces of glass, they cut tires. Pieces of aluminum cans end up in the feed, killing cattle.

Chester County dairy farmer Tim Barlow knows what it is like to lose cattle to trash in the forage. He remembers a 4-year-old pregnant cow, Pam, milking 29,000 pounds, one of his best producers. One day, he turned his head to look at her. She coughed, fell to the ground, and died in seconds.

"That was a $2,000 cow," he said. "Now it's gone."

Cause of death? Pam had no health problems. She was a healthy cow. Barlow strongly suspects it was a sharp piece of aluminum from a can.

"Our society has become such a throwaway society," said Ronald Kopp, who operates a 100-milking-cow, 800-acre dairy with his brother Jay and family near Middletown. "(Our society doesn't) want to take responsibility to dispose of any of our litter."

Kopp said one day he was working in the field and saw a pickup truck coming down the road. A man was leaning out of the passenger side window. Kopp saw an arm dangling out the window and a bottle went flying — the passenger was trying to hit a road sign as he rode by.

A lot of underage drinkers also drive the miles of road frontage and have to get rid of the "evidence," Kopp noted. He's seen whole cases of beer dropped out of the window and land on his field.

"It seems like weekends are our biggest time for litter. People are out partying and probably a lot of that is underage drinking."

The day before, Kopp said he found "cans, not even bottles, not even open yet, lying alongside the road . . . beer, mostly."

George Moyer, who helps manage Mor-Dale Farms in Myerstown, has spent many weekends walking along road frontage, picking up can and bottle trash that could wreak havoc with his farm equipment and end up in the forage.

He has been waiting patiently, along with thousands of farmers, while state legislators are considering the passage of House Bill 922. The bill would mandate a minimum 5 cent deposit on glass and aluminum containers, which the state General Assembly finds "are a major source of litter and solid waste within this Commonwealth and a direct threat to the health and safety of the citizens of Pennsylvania," as outlined in the bill.

"There are absolutely no legislators that would get up early on a Sunday or Monday morning and pick up cans or bottles in their yard before they go to work," said Moyer. "Many (legislators) are well-to-do, secluded, off the road."

Moyer, like many farmers who have been lobbying along with the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau to push passage of the bill, are showing obvious signs of frustration. They are fed up with taking valuable time away from chores and marketing their product to pick up other people's trash.

They are out of patience.

Ronald Kopp, Middletown dairy farmer, said, "Bottles are the culprits of a lot of cut tires on our farm machinery."

He held up a sharp piece of a brown beer bottle that could slice through a tractor tire, resulting in a repair job costing between $50-$100, he said. It costs $800 to replace a tractor tire.

Tim Barlow, a dairy farmer in Cochranville, has found slivers of bottle and other can trash in the forage. He cuts hay at his farm, which has a couple miles of frontage along Rts. 10 and 896 near Cochranville. He operates another farm with frontage along Baltimore Pike.

His wife, Phyllis, held up the bottom of a heavy glass bottle found alongside the road. In mid-April this year, more than 30 farmers and members of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau helped Barlow pick up trash along some of the frontage. In 10 minutes of work, a 55-gallon container was filled with trash.

Tim Barlow has found cases of beer, emptied, lying on the fields.

Barlow knows what it costs when a tire runs over the sharp glass or aluminum. A shredded back tire costs $500-$600 to replace. If repairable, the tire costs between $100-$150, in addition to downtime. A flat front tire can run from $80-$90 a piece.

A forage chopper knife was broken by a can in the field, costing $100 to repair, Barlow said.

At a press conference early this year at his Middletown farm, Ronald Kopp also pointed out a dire threat to the livestock — pieces of aluminum cans. Cans which are thrown haphazardly into hay fields get caught up in forage harvesters, and shredded, mixing with feed. Kopp showed those who attended the conference pieces of the shredded cans that have ended up in the feed bunk.

It's hard to put a dollar estimate on the kind of financial losses as a result of cows eating the litter-contaminated forage, Kopp admitted. But it could run easily into thousands of dollars.

Even though the harvester is equipped with magnets that can capture iron and steel, the magnets have no effect on aluminum. The aluminum simply passes into the feed, undetected, and consumed by livestock.

Barlow, Moyer, and Kopp all wonder: are some of the mysterious illnesses they see in cattle attributable to trash in the field? It is possible to find out. Autopsies of dead cattle are expensive and are only performed, according to Kopp, when a chronic health problem is suspected. Barlow said it costs $70 for a cow autopsy.

But what about a few downed animals that die of mysterious causes? Kopp said, "I have to wonder — is some of (the trash) getting into (cows') stomachs and cutting holes in their stomachs and causing complications?"

Barlow also wonders whether some of the sore feet on cows, such as hoof cracks and whatnot, could be caused by stepping on broken glass and cans in fields.

Like Moyer (whose son Ralph won a Dairy of Distinction Honor

Beer cans are a real culprit. They can destroy knives on the forage harvesters. Like pieces of glass, they cut tires. Pieces of aluminum cans end up in the feed, killing cattle.

He remembers a 4-year-old pregnant cow, Pam, milking 29,000 pounds, one of his best producers. One day, he turned his head to look at her. She coughed, fell to the ground, and died in seconds.

On average, Barlow estimates that two cows per year come down with some mysterious diseases that are almost impossible to pinpoint.

'Our society has become such a throwaway society.'

'There are absolutely no legislators that would get up early on a Sunday or Monday morning and pick up cans or bottles in their yard before they go to work.'

George Moyer, who helps manage Mor-Dale Farms in Myerstown, has spent many weekends walking along road frontage, picking up trash that could wreak havoc with his farm equipment and end up in the forage.

for farm appearance a short while ago), Kopp said, "We take great pride in our farm," Kopp said. "Yet I get out there on my tractor and see all the trash. People inadvertently think it's just OK to throw it out here on the farmer's field.

"I'd like to encourage the legislature to really take a hard look at this and the citizens of Pennsylvania to take responsibility for the trash that's being thrown in the rural Pennsylvania roadsides."

"The biggest cost from all this trash is to the cattle," said Tim Barlow. On average, Barlow estimates that two cows per year come down with some mysterious diseases that are almost impossible to pinpoint. If two cows are affected and end up dying, that's $4,000 lost per year — a tough thing to take when farmers believe milk prices are $10 per hundredweight lower than they need to be for dairies to survive.

If the Bottle Bill passes, Barlow knows that people are still going to travel the roads, late at night, often on their way to the shore, and throw bottles and cans out of car windows.

Ronald Kopp, Middletown dairy farmer, said, 'Bottles are the culprits of a lot of cut tires on our farm machinery.'

But the advantage would be others would come by and collect the bottles and cans and receive an incentive deposit in return.

At least, some farmers would almost welcome the chance to get paid for mornings on the weekend, collecting bottles at 5 or 10 cents each.

Farmers such as George Moyer in Myerstown, who also hosted a trash pickup event on his farm in mid-April this year, has to pay to get rid of the trash. Often, some communities have local agencies or service organizations such as churches that collect material from farms, noted Moyer. However, townships such as Bethel have no mandatory recycling in the community because of its size.

Moyer said that picking up the trash "never has an end to it," he said. "It's a year-round job, practically." Even his neighbor across the round used a five-gallon bucket in April and filled it with cans and bottles on 500 feet of road frontage.

Another challenge is the plastic bottles which can get into hay bines and wrap into the sicklebar, causing damage and lost work time.

Moyer has twice testified for the Bottle Bill in Harrisburg, to little avail. He said the legislators are "so ignorant they don't see the light of day."

A forage chopper knife was broken by a can in the field, costing $100 to repair, Barlow said.

Editor's Note: Surveys have shown farmers and nonfarmers alike want a Bottle Bill. Part two of the Bottle Bill Series will look at farmer's reactions to the proposed Bottle Bill legislation, what the Bottle Bill will entail for farmers and consumers, and what's being done to ensure its passage.

Kopp said one day he was working in the field and saw a pickup truck coming down the road. A man was leaning out of the passenger side window. Kopp saw an arm dangling out the window and a bottle went flying — the passenger was trying to hit a road sign as he rode by.

Delegates Elect New Officers And Directors

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — A new president, vice president, and five directors were elected by delegates at the 112th National Holstein Convention held June 25-28 in Grand Rapids, Mich.

Richard Keene, of Gilbertsville, N.Y., was elected president of the Holstein Association. He has served the last two years as vice president, and served on the Board of Directors 1969-77. He has judged numerous shows, including the International Holstein Show at Madison, Wis., five times, and many state, national and international shows as well.

James (Bud) Lecki, Jr., of White Pine, Tenn., was elected vice president. Leckie served on the Board of Directors 1987-95, chairing the Field Operations Committee and serving on the Finance Committee. He has a 60-cow Registered Holstein herd in White Pine.

John Gross, of Madison, S.D., worked as a classifier and technical supervisor for the Holstein Association and is a former vice president for the South Dakota Holstein Association. He dispersed his own Holstein herd in 1964, which at that time was the highest classified herd in the state. He has judged shows regionally, nationally and internationally, and is a member of the South Dakota State University's Foundation Board.

Edgar Miller, of GEM farm in Winston-Salem, N.C., has served as president, show chairman, and director of the breed improvement committee of the North Carolina Holstein Association. He has also served as president of the North Carolina Purebred Cattle Association, Dairy Foundation at North Carolina State, and DHIA, and is presently chairman of the Carolina Classic Sale. He has bred numerous Excellent cows and set many production records with his 115-cow Registered Holstein herd.

John Emerling, of Perry, N.Y., has a 685-cow operation, of which 450 are Registered. He has served as the New York Holstein Association treasurer, and is past general chairman of the Holstein Carousel Show/Sale and current chairperson of New York State-sponsored sales.

Elmo Wendorf, Jr., of Ixonia, Wis., has an 85-cow herd in partnership with his brother under the Crescentmead prefix. He will fill the second half of the four-year director position formerly held by Keith Stump. Wendorf was president of the Wisconsin Holstein Association in 1990 and is chairman of the 2007 National Holstein Convention planned for Wisconsin.

David Pierson, of Lake City, Minn., was re-elected to a second four-year term. He owns and operates Sapa Ska Farm with his brother and son with a milking herd of 90 Registered Holsteins. He is a past president of the Minnesota Holstein Association and is a trustee of the Holstein Foundation. He served on the Genetic Advancement Committee and the Finance Committee in his first term as national director.

Distinguished Members Named

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — Seven Holstein Junior members were named finalists in the Holstein Association's Distinguished Junior Member competition. The awards were presented at the National Holstein Convention Grand Rapids, Mich., in June 28, 1997.

Traditionally, only six finalists are named in the annual contest. However, close competition warranted a tie for the sixth finalist; therefore a seventh was named.

Finalists are: Bradley Ainslie of Hartwick, N.Y.; Jennifer Belter, of South Burlington, Vt.; Nicolas Buttars of Lewiston, Utah; Zachary Janssen, of Island Lake, Ill.; Jason Meier, of Ridott, Ill.; Jeremey Michaud, of East Hardwick, Vt.; and Jill Olsen, of College Ward, Utah.

Twelve semifinalists were named from applicants around the country. National winners must win at the state level before they can proceed to the national level. The seven finalists receive a lifetime membership to the Holstein Association.

"The real strength of our new system, we believe, is the ability to disclose openly and fully the ancestry of any Holstein animal," according to Bob Traweek, who served as chairman of the Holstein Board of Directors' Executive Committee. "It creates an opportunity for virtually any Holstein to be officially recorded."

The Association's Board members worked for the past 12 months to create a proposal that would facilitate the accurate, fully disclosed identification of the Holstein cattle population. "While we believe that most of the best genetics are still in what we term the "purebred population," (now 100 percent RHA-NA) there are good cattle outside of that population, some here at home, some abroad," Traweek said. "We want to fulfill our responsibility to be the source of official identification for these animals as well, particularly since they are being marketed both here and abroad."

Certificates and pedigrees will clearly and prominently display each animal's RHA both at the top of the document and next to every animal's identification number. Animals with 87 percent or higher RHA will be eligible for national shows and recognition programs.

When the new herdbook system is fully implemented, later in 1997, the Identified Holstein Female program and the Qualified Holstein program will be eliminated.

Traweek believes that the new structure will take the identification of Holsteins to a new level in the U.S. and globally.

"With this herdbook, we can disclose each animal's available ancestry more accurately and fully than any other herdbook in the world. This proposal, in fact, creates a new world standard for herdbooks!" he said.

For more information about the Holstein Association's new herdbook structure, please contact the Association at 1-800-952-5200.

Minnesota Couple Named Distinguished Young Breeder

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — Scott and Jacolyn Rickeman, of Hutchinson, Minn., are the winners of the Holstein Associaton USA's 1996 Distinguished Young Holstein Breeder Award. The Floralawn herd currently consists of 70 cows with a 23,738 Rolling Herd Average, with 876 pounds fat and 761 pounds protein. The majority of the herd is Registered, with some Qualified, Identified Holstein Females, and a few grade animals.

The Rickemans moved to their current location in 1987, with a small herd of animals they had built up while farming with Scott's parents. A small grade herd was added at that time as well. Since that time, the couple has concentrated on building registered cow numbers in the herd, focusing on breeding for type and longevity.

Currently, they have six Excellent cows, 25 Very Goods, and 18 Good Plus animals in the herd. Their BAA on 40 Registered and Qualified cows is 107.2; it is 107.6 on 10 Identified Holstein Females.

Scott was recently elected to serve on the Minnesota Holstein Associaton Board of Directors, and Jackie has served on the state junior advisor committee. They have both been active in their McLeod County Holstein Club, with Scott serving nine years as a board member and also vice president and president. Jackie has served as club secretary, and they have hosted a barn meeting and a twilight meeting.

In 1993, they were named the county's Distinguished Young Couple, and in 1997 received Minnesota's Distinguished Young Holstein Breeder.

Both Scott and Jackie were active FFA members, and they currently serve as leaders for the Lynn Hustlers 4-H Club. They assist at all the 4-H events their children — Kelly, 15; Tracy, 13; Casey, 11; and Neil, 8 — take part in. They have also given farm tours to numerous kindergarten and pre-school children.

The Rickemans maintain herd health checks every two weeks, and employ management practices that ensure safe, high-quality milk production. Cows are milked twice daily and are on DHIR test.

They are currently working to increase the percentage of Registered Holsteins in the herd so they can create new marketing opportunities. They recently exhibited for the first time at the Minnesota State Show, where Floralawn Blackstar Dee was named All-Minnesota Bred and Owned Senior Three-Year-Old. They also have consigned animals to sales, and have sold heifers to local dairies looking to expand their herds.

Florida Teams Take Championships In Ayrshire Dairy Bowl Contest

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — Six teams vied for top honors in the Dairy Quiz Bowl Contest at the 122nd Ayrshire Breeders' Association Convention in Lancaster, Pa. The preliminary rounds of the junior and senior competitions were held on the evening of June 18, with finals taking place on June 19. Competing against teams from Maryland as well as against combined teams, Florida was victorious in both the junior and senior divisions.

Florida's senior team consisted of Jennifer Clements from Okeechobee, Joshua Churchwell of Plant City, Jody Salter from Plant City, and Christine Thomas of Riverview. The junior team was made up by Emily Clements of Okeechobee, Stacy Revels from Bushnell, Darren McGrath from Okeechobee, and Serena Churchwell from Plant City. Florida's dairy bowl coaches are Suzanne Churchwell, Mary Sowerby and Debbie Clements. The teams advanced to the final round by earning a bye, and then won the title by beating two combined teams.

The National Ayrshire Dairy Bowl contest was administered by the Holstein Foundation. The Holstein Foundation serves as a non-breed affiliated organization helping to support, create, and continue dairy youth activities.

Vermont Dairies Enjoy Northeast Service

ITHACA, N.Y. — About three months ago Northeast DHIA hired a new Technician in Franklin County, Vermont. Diane Spear brought with her 10 years of experience with another DHI, and the proven ability to get the job done for her members. When she began, her circuit consisted of a handful of herds and less than 1,000 cows. Within three months time Diane's circuit has grown to include more than 32 herds and over 3,200 cows.

There are several reasons for the explosive growth of business for Diane. Chief among them is Diane's reputation for providing excellent service. This prompted many herds to join Diane in her transition to Northeast DHIA. One herd owner who followed Diane stated, "Our technician, Diane Spear, makes DHI work for us. We value her experience and she provides us with an excellent service. I think now that she has more to offer in the way of information, the service is only going to be better."

Another reason for her success is flexibility on sample day. "The Dairy Comp 305 software allows me to do a lot more for my farmers on test day. The reports are easily customized and the information can be tailored for each herd I work with. It is amazing to me how much more I am able to do with Dairy Comp," notes Diane. In addition to customized reports on sample day, Diane can offer her members a full range of services from milk weights only to traditional DHI testing programs, and everything in-between.

Northeast DHIA is a farmer-owned cooperative that serves over 3,800 members in the nine-state area of Vermont, Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania. If you would like more information about Northeast DHIA services, you may call the Northeast DHIA Center at 1-800-344-2697 and press "1" for Farm Services.

Dairy One assured, Northeast DHIA Farm Services strives to provide more substance to its Northeast dairies.

Conservation Expo Helps Make 'One Thing Perfectly Clear'

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

CHURCHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — Not all things in life are free, but this year's Lancaster County Conservation Expo could make you think differently.

The Expo will offer a free water test for nitrates to those who attend — among many other things to promote soil stewardship and to celebrate the heritage of farming.

The fourth annual Expo, held in conjunction with the Shirktown Threshing Festival at the Bob Shirk Farm in Churchtown, is scheduled Saturday, Aug. 2, from 9 a.m.-3 p.m.

According to Kevin Seibert, district conservationist and chairman of the Expo, those who attend the free outing at Bob Shirk's farm can bring along a small sample of tap water. Seibert suggests that you allow the tap to run for a minute, then collect a sample of the water in a small, clean baby food jar.

Bring the jar to the Expo. A nitrogen quick test will provide an indication of whether the water is low, medium, or high in nitrate levels — and whether more complete testing of the water source is necessary.

Clean water is a focus of the Expo. The district's annual report, titled "Let's Make One Thing Perfectly Clear," indicates that "Lancaster County owes its economic strength, splendid landscape, rich history, and bountiful food to a thin rich layer of topsoil, adequate rainfall, and ordinary people who are wise stewards of these natural resources in our county."

Travis Martin, of the Lancaster County Conservation District, explained that in the winter edition of the district newsletter, The Conservation Crier, a survey was offered to readers to help determine their environmental concerns. There were 100 responses to the survey. The number one concern voiced by readers of the newsletter was water quality.

Groundwater supplies and well water have a clear, distinct relationship to how well the topsoil is managed and what practices are used to maintain it.

"Everyone is a stakeholder in water quality," said Martin. "Our county's going through a transition, and everyone has a responsibility for water quality."

Not only high production farmers, but other businesses as well as homeowners involved in lawn care, people with septic systems, and many other groups and individuals are responsible for helping to maintain the county's water quality. In the survey, other concerns high on the list included soil erosion and farmland conservation.

Soil erosion can be directly linked to deteriorating water quality. Phosphorous locked up in soil that has eroded helps form algae blooms, taking oxygen out of the water, making water less habitable for waterlife.

Martin said the emphasis of the Expo is to show that we all live in the watersheds outlined on the map. Those who have responsibility for the land should be aware of what watershed they live in — and how to maintain that watershed.

Last year about 500 landowners attended the Expo at the Threshing Festival. Old-time threshing equipment, including steam and diesel, will again be on display. For farmers, events include rotational grazing, farm equipment exhibits from steam to diesel, nutrient management law information, and conservation practices for the farm.

For sports enthusiasts, there will be various group displays featuring present and past accomplishments in the conservation of the county's natural resources, in addition to stream and wildlife habitant improvements and a stream study.

For homeowners, there will be landscaping, natural lawn care, and water testing demonstrations.

For children, there will be games, a stream study, and farm safety information.

One of the highlights of the Expo is information on septic system maintenance. According to Seibert, many people "don't know the proper way to install and maintain septic systems," he said. "They simply don't know how."

The Expo will help to change all that.

The Threshing Festival itself features plenty of good local food and charm. The Expo will be held rain or shine. Admission and parking are free.

The Expo, Martin explained, is a "travelling" type of event, which will be held in different locations in the county in following years. This is the fourth annual festival and the second time it is scheduled for the Threshing Festival.

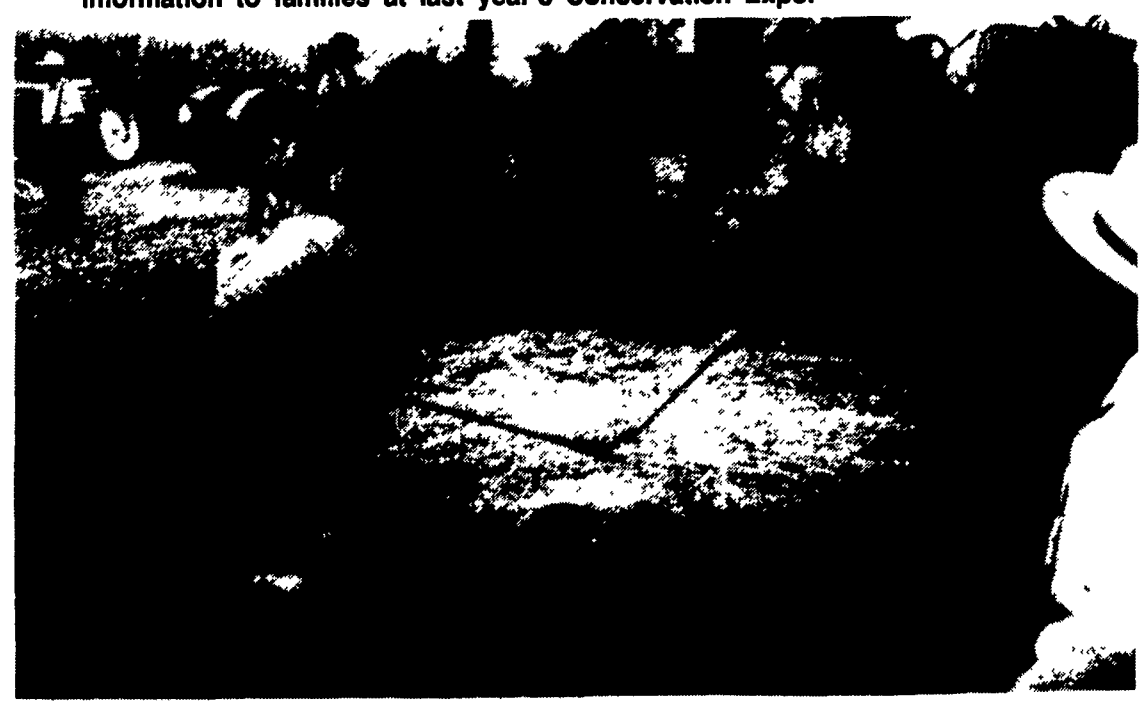
Participants of the Expo and Threshers Festival watch as long-ago farm machinery is demonstrated.

Chotty Sprenkle, Lancaster Conservation District, background at right, provides information to families at last year's Conservation Expo.



Here is a future farmer threshing the wheat with a flayer which has now been replaced with modern-day harvesters at the Shirktown Threshers Festival.

Giving Soil A Good Name

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Bruce R. James, a professor of soil chemistry at the University of Maryland, is a man with a mission.

Dr. James wants the world to elevate soil to equal partnership with air and water in the triad of earth systems that have influenced our understanding of ecology, culture, religion, agriculture and the arts throughout history.

He takes great issue with grammar textbook authors and other writers who equate soil with words like "besmirch," "dirty" and "smudge."

By linking the various soil disciplines more closely with the aquatic and atmospheric sciences, he feels strongly that the three major earth systems (water, air and land) could help us to understand ecosystems more clearly and our relationships to them.

To further these concepts, James last year founded the International Center for Soil and Society, with encouragement from the International Society of Soil Science, based in Vienna, Austria.

From July 5-7, the center was to have its inaugural meeting with high hopes that it will become an annual worldwide event. Up to 50 persons from nine countries were expected to attend.

During the three-day meeting, speakers from a wide range of backgrounds were to guide participants toward the goal of developing new thinking, understanding and appreciation for the role of soil in the earth's ecosystem.

For more information, contact Dr. James by phone at (301) 405-1345, by fax at (301) 314-9041 or by e-mail at bj5@umail.umd.edu.

Use Of Seed Treatment

There is some concern that the bacteria could be affected by the use of fungicides with an inoculant. But the plants still benefit from the bacteria.

Making use of seed treatments really depends on how frequently soybeans are grown on the land, and many factors can affect the viability of material.

To apply the inoculant, many growers simply use a garbage can or some other container, pour the seed in, and mix the material like a batch of cookies. The seed should be planted right away. Waiting too long to finally get the seeds in the ground with proper planting depth and good seed-to-soil contact could affect the efficiency of the inoculants.

Inoculants, which are a combination of bacteria and a material to make them adhere to the seed, work on increasing the amount and mass of the nodules. The nodules are critical in nitrogen fixation.

Different varieties of soybeans will also respond in different ways to inoculant use. More work at Penn State is under way to study those differences and other factors in inoculant use.

And in the end, the weather plays a vital role in the quality of stand and yield results. At harvest, yield information will be gathered at the Bitler test plots to compare how effective the inoculant treatments were.

Extension Agent Appointed

the only female in male-dominated fields but that isn't of consequence to her.

She said, "My position has always been: I'm a human, you're a human, let's get the job done."

Getting the job done on time is a trademark of Parker. Those who work with her know that there is regular time and there is "Zoann's time." Her time is always at least five minutes before the designated time.

Parker is thrilled to be assigned to a position that makes her "an advocate for the farmer."

"This is another opportunity to work in an industry I love, to take on new challenges and make agriculture stronger," she said.

Parker's appointment is effective July 14. In her responsibilities, she will have direct supervisory responsibility for the Bureau of Animal Diagnostic Services. She is looking forward to seeing the diagnostic lab become accredited to expedite health papers so that Pennsylvania's livestock can be marketed internationally.

Although not all her responsibilities have been clarified, Parker knows that she will be putting structure to the seven regional agriculture offices across the state to help support the Department of Agricultures community-based programs.

Parker is already brimming with plans and ideas to breathe life into her new responsibilities. Of these, she cannot speak freely at this time.

But those who know her well, are confident that she will bring refreshing perspective to the position. Yet, they question whether or not she will be able to maintain her optimistic "let's move now approach" in a highly charged political atmosphere.

Parker and Hayes, who appointed her, knew each other for years through agriculture circles and through Hayes' son accompanying Parker on a 4-H trip to Poland.

"I have the deepest respect for Sam Hayes. He has my kind of drive and he knows what's happening, not only nationally but internationally," Parker said. "It's exciting to see someone with so much strength and energy in the agriculture community bringing our product to the forefront of the nation."

Parker grew up on a New York dairy farm. After receiving an associate's degree from Cobleskill Agricultural and Technical College, a bachelor's degree in agriculture education from Cornell University, she went on to receive a master's degree in training and development and a doctorate in vocational industrial education at Penn State.

Through affiliation with the Penn State Extension, Parker has written training manuals on animal production.

She has coordinated educational and marketing programs with countries such as Poland, China, Korea, Mexico, and Canada.

Many people who worked with Parker in 4-H were unaware of the extent of work that she did nationally and internationally. That was by Parker's intent.

"In 4-H I wanted them to know that I was available 110 percent of the time. And, in my ratite affiliation the same," she said.

Before she left her extension position, Parker would have preferred to see the 4-H program financially secure forever through endowment programs.

"The major downfall about this opportunity is that I'm leaving behind my family of 4-H'ers. I'll always be grateful to the training, support, and friendship that Lancaster County has offered me. It's the best county and I'm delighted that I can still live here while taking on a new position," Parker said.

She will commute to Harrisburg from her Quarryville home and promises to keep in touch with 4-H'ers. Although she will be on her new job, Parker promises that she will spend the annual sleep-out night during 4-H Roundup with 4-H'ers.

She said, "Youth are ingrained in my life. Youth and animals will always make up the fabric of my life."

Watching leaders and 4-H members meet their goals and making sure there were no roadblocks in getting every opportunity desired has brought Parker much satisfaction over the years.

After more than a decade as Lancaster County extension agriculture agent in charge of 4-H, Dr. Zoann Parker will leave the post to accept her appointment as deputy secretary of administration for the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, effective July 14.

Parker has a husband in the shadows of her personal life. The couple raise 14 emus, pygmy goats, a miniature Sicilian donkey, miniature horses, traditional steers, a hedgehog, "and the love of my life, a gray poodle puppy."

Parker will replace Walter Peechatka, who retired June 30.

Lancaster Amish Purchase Record Number Of Farms

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — The Old Order Amish purchased a record number of farms in Lancaster County in 1996, a sure sign that this deeply religious and tightly knit ethnic community intends to stay rooted in the "Garden Spot of America."

The Amish realized a net gain of 29 farms, according to a study released by Dr. Conrad L. Kanagy, a sociology professor at Elizabethtown College. That is the single most dramatic increase in farms purchased by the Amish in one year and more than doubles the gain posted in any previous year since farm sales in Lancaster County began to be recorded in 1984.

"The Amish are taking it upon themselves to accumulate as much land as they can for their children in a way that defies the typical economic patterns of those who have acquired wealth in this country," Kanagy explained, adding, "They are reinvesting their income into the land because the Amish family ties are so important. There are not many places in the country that have communities like the Amish."

Kanagy's study of farm sales in Lancaster County, Pa., reveals that the Amish acquired a net gain of 2,297 acres in 1996, valued at $14,967,838. Fifteen of the 29 farms purchased are located in Southern Lancaster County. However, the Amish purchased farms in all regions, including five farms in the Eastern region between U.S. routes 23 and 30, an area that sees the heaviest tourist traffic in the County because it is most closely associated with the Amish.

"What's amazing is that Amish have realized this incredible gain in farms without the assistance of any bureaucratic or government agency. They are driven by their cultural ideal of a community that is tied to the land. They want to be perceived as a community that can say, 'We're still farming,'" Kanagy said, emphasizing that between 1993 and 1996 only one Amish farm was lost to the outside community.

Another significant statistic in Kanagy's report is that the purchase of farmland for coporate use — developers, retailers, businesses — is still booming. Corporations gained eleven farms in 1995 and 10 more in 1996.

"As other economic indicators such as unemployment suggest, the Lancaster County economy is in a boom period," Kanagy said, explaining that farm sales to corporations dried up to only one net farm gained for corporate use between 1990 and 1994.

An explosion of business activity among the Amish, in quilts and crafts for tourists, home and building construction, and lawn furniture manufacturing, has created a new echelon of wealthy Amish. However, the Amish are restricted by their religion from reinvesting all of their profits in their businesses.

"If a business looks like it is getting too large, Amish leaders will approach the businessman and ask him to limit the size of his business to conform to the Amish community's expectations of its members," Kanagy reported. This practice frees up profits to be plowed back into Lancaster County farmlands.

Kanagy's study also reported farms gained or lost by two Mennonite groups in Lancaster County, the Weaverland Mennonites who lost three farms in 1996 and the Groffdale Mennonites, who gained two farms in 1996, which suggests that these Mennonite groups are moving out of Lancaster County at a more rapid rate.

Kanagy joined the Elizabethtown College faculty in 1993. He is a graduate of Wheaton College in Illinois and earned both his master's degree and doctoral degree at Pennsylvania State University. He was one of 10 sociologists accepted into the Young Scholars in American Religion program in 1996, sponsored by the Pew Charitable Trusts. He has published or presented more than 40 papers based on his research in fields of race and ethnicity, social organizations, community theory, religion, and environmental movements/attitudes.

Elizabethtown College, founded in 1899, is a four-year private, residential college which offers 38 major programs in 20 disciplines in the traditional liberal arts and in pre-professional fields such as accounting, business, communications, engineering, music therapy, occupational theraphy, and social work. The college, located in Lancaster County, Pa. between Harrisburg and Lancaster, has an enrollment of 1,524 students. It has been recognized for the third year in a row by U.S. News & World Report as one of the top four regional liberal arts colleges in the North.

Eighth Ag Horizons Conference Announced

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Convinced that new and future biotechnology and communication technology will have a tremendous impact on the success of Pennsylvania agriculture, the 1997 Ag Horizons Planning Committee has scheduled experts to discuss both areas at its upcoming Conference.

The Ag Horizons Conferences are designed to provide ag educators (Penn State Extension staff, instructors of vocational agriculture and young farmer adult advisors) with an opportunity to be updated annually on cooperative and agricultural developments impacting farmers in eastern and central PA.

The Wildwood Conference Center of Harrisburg Area Community College will be the setting for the eighth annual conference scheduled for Tuesday, July 29, 1997. The Conference begins at 9 a.m. with registration and a continental breakfast, includes lunch, and will conclude at approximately 3:30 p.m.

Discussing Animal biotechnology will be Dr. Roland Leach, Professor of Poultry Science at Penn State University. Dr. Kathryn Kolacz, Agronomic Soybean Leader with Ceregen — a division of Monsanto — will inform the Conference participants what's "around the corner" in crop and plant biotechnology.

After lunch, Land O'Lakes Vice President and Chief Technical Officer, Dr. David Hettinga, will give the audience a view of new developments in the food product industry. The area of communication and information technology will be covered by Dr. Mark Varner, Extension Diary Scientist at the University of Maryland and co-developer/co-moderator of Dairy-L.

Also — during the day-long, information packed program — Penn State's Dr. Harold Ott, Regional Director for Penn State Cooperative Extension, will lead a workshop on sharing ways to impact the information collected at this Conference to the clients of the participants.

AG Horizons Conferences are sponsored by the PA Council of Cooperatives (PCC), the Southeast Region PCC Board, Penn State's Cooperative Business Education and Research Program, and local cooperatives. Educators desiring more information should call Carol Duncan (610) 693-5601.

Weather Plays Havoc With Pesticides, Field Crops

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANDISVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — The unusual coolness of spring and summer, and relative dryness, have played havoc with pesticide strategies this year, according to Penn State agronomic researchers.

And while the atypical weather has seemed to provide for an excellent small grain harvest to date, there are concerns from some about getting enough quality homegrown forage harvested to feed livestock.

Likewise, the effect on the growth of corn has some concerned. Corn has been showing the effects of low moisture. Whether called "spiking," "curling," or becoming "pineapple corn," it is all the same thing — a reaction by corn to a lack of moisture. It has been occuring in numerous fields throughout the central and south central region.

And while there was spotty rainfall this week, with some severe storms (a poultry house was blown down in Lancaster) and even some very localized flash flooding, the majority of the area remained dry with cool, dry and relatively low humidity weather forcast through the weekend.

While some regions of the state have received beneficial rains from storms tracking up the Ohio Valley, the heartland of Pennsylvania agriculture has begun to suffer from a lack of soil moisture.

Dr. William Curran, an agronomic extension specialist with the Penn State University College of Agricultural Sciences Department of Agronomy, and John Yocum, manager and senior researcher at the Penn State Landisville Research Laboratory (farm), held a technical field day Thursday to review the early results of variety, herbicide and tillage field trials on weed control at the eastern Lancaster County research farm.

Some of the studies involved looking at the uses of early pre-emergence and early post-emergence applications of various herbicides as well as standard pre and post applications, according to tillage practices, the use of herbicide resistant crops, and the control of herbicide resistant crops.

At this stage in the studies, any conclusion about results requires first-hand observance and interpretations.

However, it was concluded that cool days and cool nights coupled with a lack of rainfall have had a fairly dramatic effect on most herbicides, especially some of the newer ones which break down quickly and have little residual efficacy.

Except for county extension agents, almost all of the estimated 85 participants represented commericial pesticide companies, consultants and crop dealers.

According to Curran, while producers are welcome to such field day events, the technical nature of the material requires a fairly strong understanding of the chemical families and their actions in order to understand the comparisons and what they mean.

He said that other events are held during the year that are tailored more for producers rather than industry technicians and company representatives.

Some of the participants noted the same, although at least one Extension agent said he wished more producers would attend, so they could see for themselves the results of research.

The gist of the research plots was to compare pre- and post-emergence herbicides on different crops, with different planting applications, such as 30-inch width row corn versus 15-inch width row corn.

Most of the different pesticide manufacturers offer a range of products that all basically fall within a limited number of chemical families. Some references of available commercial pesticides list the companies and the brand names of their products according to the groupings of targeted pests, such as fungicides, insecticides, etc.

There were 23 new or experimental herbicides used in the 1997 trials.

Some of the people who attended said that while much of the information isn't of specific interest to them, they like to attend to see what the field results have been to get a better understanding of what may be happening in pro-

(Turn to Page A34)

Dr. William Curran, Penn State agronomic researcher stands next to one of two wagons carrying participants in a special weed field day event at the Penn State Landisville Field Lab, while Ed Werner, a research technician who works for Curran, explains some of the treatments in the plots the group is about to walk through.

John Yocum, senior researcher at Landisville Research Lab, said that corn yield could be affected with repeated responses to low moisture, even if moisture levels eventually recover and the crop receives enough time to mature properly.

Some of the participants in a Penn State weed field day event spread out through fields to look at specific treatment plots. Some of the corn in the fields show "curling" because of a lack of moisture. That could affect crop yield.

A harvest scene on an Amish farm in Lancaster County located at the corner of Shirk and Peters Roads south of New Holland Wednesday afternoon. Dry weather has helped to dry the grain and cure the second cutting hay. But corn is suffering in southeast Pennsylvania. The flock of birds in the air was raised from a feast from the shocks of wheat by the photographer. Photo by Everett Newswanger, managing editor.

Weather Plays Havoc

ducer fields in their areas of concern.

Others said that they attend the annual field day in order to stay abreast of some of the introductions and chemical product names. One participant said he has been working in the industry for about 30 years and that the rate of pesticide introductions has never been greater. He said he had to attend such field days just to try to keep up with the introductions and get a feel for what the products will do in comparison to other new products and existing ones.

Different combinations and mixes of pesticides, especially herbicides, can have different names, and many of those who attended are familiar with the chemical families and what aspect of plant growth they are used to control.

The research field day is important to the companies and to farmer consultants because Penn State offers objectivity with its field data, and presents that data at face value.

The company representatives can take what they learn about their products and what they learn about their competitor's products so as to better advise customers on uses and strategies for their uses.

The field day didn't provide special credits for participants, but did provide all with a look at a number of new generation pesticides, some of which are still not yet approved for public sale.

However, what the research did show fairly conclusively was that weather and resultant plant growth can dramatically affect weed control strategies.

According to Curran, the coolness and dryness of the weather retarded crop growth, while it served to protect weeds from the effects of herbicides.

The control of broadleaf weeds and grasses was affected because it is believed that because the weather wasn't conducive to strong growth, and may have caused some short term type of dormancy during the effective treatment period, that the weeds were not readily absorbing the chemicals designed to block growth.

This year has been exceptionally cool for the region, with only one day in the 90s by June 21, the longest day of the year. On that day, at Landisville, the research farm recorded 91 degrees.

However, at the same time, nighttime temperatures were low, and didn't break into the 70s until June 26, when it hit 71. It then dropped down to 60 the next night, and to the low 50s for the next several nights.

Furthermore, rainfall has been in deficit in south central Pennsylvania, which also retards plant growth.

From the many examples at the Landisville Research Field Lab, it appears that weeds were protected somewhat because of the influence of weather and lack of moisture, and were able to survive through the efficacy period of the herbicides (some not all), while at the same time, the crops failed to grow as fast as necessary to create a canopy over the ground in order to block sunlight from reaching weeds emerging afterward.

The field day provided participants with application data and the type of study being performed. The trials, of course, won't be completed until yield comparisons can be made.

However, for weed studies, the participants used the application data and could determine for themselves the effectiveness of control on such weeds as velvet leaf, lambsquarters, Canadian thistle, black nightshade, pigweed, etc.

Curran said that weed control has been especially very important this year because of the lack of rainfall.

"We're seeing some problems because early crops are not as competitive with the weeds. There are problems with pre-emergent and post-emergent applications.

"The Roundup ready corn is the most exciting," he said. "It's been looking very good at eing able to control virtually any weed," he said, noting that it has limits with the control of bindweed in corn.

Berks County Extension Agronomy Agent Mena Hautau attended the event. She said that the effects of the weather has varied in Berks County, which has a fairly wide variety of soils and growing conditions.

The better water-retaining, loamy soils of the southern portion of the county, from Robesonia to Oley and Kutztown, have been doing well with little evidence of dryness.

At the same time, however, the northern sector of the county, with thin shalely soils has been suffering with a lack of good hay production. She said that a field trial she's involved with, that is looking at a type of maize for use in grazing,

Tax Break Incentive Proposed For Farms In Preservation Programs

"I appreciate the fact that Joe (Pitts) is reintroducing legislation that was developed over a period of time from what I learned when I talked to farmers about what was needed for farmland preservation," Walker said. "Farmland preservation does not make sense if these efforts don't fit with farm economics. These two measures are designed to fit with farm economics. By eliminating the estate (death) tax, you assure the family can keep the farm for long term family benefits. And if the farmer is going to sell the farm and use the money for retirement, then capital gains tax breaks assure the farmer of the benefit of the accrued value of the farm's chief asset. Both fit well with farm economics and make sense as a preservation tool. A number of farm preservation and environmental groups are taking an interest in this bill. Finding money to buy up property is difficult. But this incentive created at the federal level does not require the expenditure of federal money."

State senator Noah Wenger (R-36) spoke of this legislation as the next step in the farmland preservation. He called it the continuing effort to keep agriculture strong and viable in Pennsylvania.

Senator Robert Thompson, (R-19) reported on efforts for local tax reform to help keep the farm in the family until the estate is settled. He said that right now farmers are having a difficult time making ends meet, and these steps will continue agriculture's growth in Pennsylvania.

Representative Art Hershey (R-13) said that as land values increase, the Congress needs to be sensitive to the cost of investment for the farm family. "The success of the farm is the families involved," Hershey said. "These farm families make strong communities. It's nice to hear some relief is coming. You can't by law sell farms to the next generation for a few dollars. Now you need appraisals approved by taxing authorities, and then capital gains are based on that price."

Recently Pennsylvania's senate passed a resolution urging the U.S. Congress to enact permanent estate tax relief for Pennsylvania. This tax relief became part of the Taxpayer Relief Act, which Congress just passed. In this act, estate tax exemption went from $600,000 to $1 million. Pitts said this will significantly help many people, but work needs to continue to eliminate this unfair tax.

Congressman Joe Pitts outlines his federal legislative proposal to eliminate estate and capital gains taxes from farms that have been preserved. In support are from left, Congressman Bob Walker; Art Hershey, state representative; and Noah Wenger, and Bob Thompson, both state senators.

has been suffering.

Pastures aren't responding, and alfalfa and grasses haven't come back from the first cutting, and the second cutting was light for some.

She said that is of particular concern to dairy and beef producers who may be facing tight supplies of forages and high prices.

She said she is part of a computer networking group concerned with field crops and conditions, and that it has been suggested this week, that, if the dry regions of the state receive an inch or more of rainfall per week for the next couple of weeks, the corn could catch up, because there should be enough growing degree days left in the year.

John Yocum said that while corn can easily recover from periods which cause "pineapple" corn, repeated stress on the plant from going into such a water-conserving state will have a negative effect on whole plant yield, cob and kernel development.

In other news, it was announced that producers are invited to attend a tour of conservation tillage, Bt crops and Roundup Ready corn and soybeans, 9 a.m., Friday, July 18, at the Brubaker Research Farm, located along Auction Road, about two miles east of the Penn State Landisville Research Farm.

Monsanto Corp. is sponsoring the tour, with several other commercial representatives to be present.

For those seeking an alternative to Roundup Ready crops, or a new tool to reduce the amount of that herbicide needed, there is also to be a demonstration of a new "hooded sprayer."

According to a Monsanto spokesperson, the hooded sprayer allows extremely control application of Roundup between the rows, so that crops are not touched while weeds between the rows are well contacted.

He said that the hood over the spray nozzel rides against the ground and prevents drift and mist escape.

Markel Accepts Finance Position

DAVID BIGELOW
Training Coordinator

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Pa. DHIA General Manager Dave Slusser has announced the employment of Larry Markel as director of finances and human resources.

Larry and his wife Barbara, have two sons, Ben and Eric, both students at Penn State University.

Past work experience includes being controller at General Refractories, J.H. France Refractories and Swan Technologies.

The finance and personnel director develops and maintains the cooperative's financial reporting system, preparing monthly and annual financial reports to the board and management staff. He is to prepare cost analysis information to department heads and the manager so all involved with the cooperative can efficiently provide DHIA services to the members.

Larry Markel

Larry graduated from Penn State with a bachelor's degree in accounting, and is also a veteran of Vietnam.

We are pleased to have Larry with us. His business experience gives him a good understanding of farmers and their cooperatives.

Remember, these are averages, so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

allocations under the DEIP for the period of Jly 1, 1997-Jun 30, 1998.

FUTURES AND CASH PRICES

CSCE BFP milk futures continued to drop on reports of ample stock. On Thursday, Jly BFP milk was up 1c at $11.14/cwt, while Aug fell 12c to $11.71.

BFP open interest continues to build. Total open interest was up 42 lots on Thursday at 1,065 after first trading in early-April.

CSCE raw milk futures fell 23c basis Aug, settling at $13.58 on Thursday, while Oct fell 10c to $14.10.

Nonfat dry milk traded at the CSCE was unchanged on Thursday, but slightly higher than last week's trading levels. Nonfat dry milk traded for Jly delivery was steady at 105.50c, while Aug was also steady at 107.00c.

Cheddar cheese futures were firmer in the nearby Aug market, while Oct was steady. Aug was up 20 points at 125.50c, while Oct was steady at 133.00c on Thursday.

CSCE raw milk open interest was at 43 lots, unchanged on Thursday, cheddar cheese futures were steady at 23 lots, and nonfat dry milk was down 1 lot at 69 lots.

CSCE butter futures open interest was unchanged at 194 lots.

At the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, all butter futures were lower. Jly fell 250 points to 104.00c, while Sep fell 250 points to 108.15c on Thursday.

BFP milk traded at the CME for Aug delivery was down 20c at $11.65/cwt.

All grades of bulk butter are unchanged. Grade AA is still at $1.1300, Grade A is at $1.0500, and Grade B is $1.0500.

CME block cash cheese prices were up slightly today, while barrel cheese was unchanged.

CME barrel cheese closed at $1.1225 per pound, unchanged from last Thursday, on 12 lots of volume. While 40-pound blocks were up at $1.1975, up 3c from a week ago on volume of 18 lots.

FEED GRAINS

Friday morning's monthly USDA production and supply/demand report likely will include revised US wheat production estimates. Marketers said this afternoon those figures will capture the most cash grain market attention when the report is released at 0730 CT. Anticipation ahead of the report kept all US grain marketing light, merchants said.

Futures traders cut those gains roughly in half today, but merchants still think an extremely large production estimate could send prices plummeting.

Wheat harvest in southern and central Nebraska has hit high gear. Merchants reported yields of 60-70 bushels per acre in some southwest Nebraska locations.

The northern Midwest remains the location where most old-crop cornand soybean supplies remain, but it also is the area where farmers seem most reluctant to sell.

Lower spot soybean basis levels, though, are not encouraging sales. Spot soybean basis bids dropped as much as 8c today, meaning straight cash bids dropped as much as 10-12c.

MILK PRODUCTION HIGHER SOMATIC CELL COUNT LOWER AS MORE DAIRYMEN TEST FORMULA-M

As I am writing this, there are hundred and hundreds more Dairymen testing Formula M. The results are trickling in. By the time you read this, we may have the final results. I have been testing Formula M for years and all the results have exceeded my expectations in appetite improvement; higher energy level; giving more milk; cows (even the extremely difficult or next to impossible ones) getting pregnant on the first breeding.

AND NOW!!! Dairymen everywhere are telling me that the Somatic Cell Count goes down when they feed Formula M. Over and over, I am hearing that the Somatic Cell Count goes way down. Dairymen tell me that they have tried other products and that they thought they saw some benefits, but the same Dairymen tell me that they see very dramatic differences almost immediately when using Formula M. Dairymen say they see a vast improvement in energy level and appetite. They say that they can see a significant increase in milk in a week to ten days after starting on Formula M. Some Dairymen say their cows average 5 pounds more milk per cow, per day. The last reports I am waiting for are on Somatic Cell Count. They keep coming in and they keep verifying what we have been told many times before, that the Somatic Cell Count goes way down when feeding Formula M

If I had known all this before I set the price, (8¢ per cow, per day) I might have charged more. After all, it looks like most Dairymen will make an extra $1.00 per cow, per day.

Formula M is a powder and it comes in a 5 gallon plastic bucket. Feed Formula M according to the directions on the label, only ½ ounce per cow per day. (Formula M is very concentrated. ½ ounce per day is all they need). You can put Formula M in the TMR, you can put it in your grain mix or if you prefer, you can top dress Formula M. All you need to do to get Formula M is call one of the numbers below. We ship the same day by UPS. Make the check payable to FRANK LAMPLEY and give it to the driver when he delivers.

A 5 gallon bucket is enough for about 40 cows for one month and costs only $92.00 (I pay freight). Formula M is completely free of drugs and made by the same people who make Vitamix.

There is one question that keeps coming up over and over, "How long do I have to keep feeding the Formula M?" "Forever?" The answer is, "Only as long as you want to keep making the extra dollar per day, per cow."

FORMULA M... IT'S WHAT CAUSES BABIES

Kampen's Culinary Skills Cook Up First Place Win

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — When Edith Kampen read a newspaper article about a cooking contest, creative ideas started flowing. As she sat at the table by her kitchen window, she imagined a tasty combination of chicken with cheesy dumplings.

Never mind that she had never tasted anything like it before or even read about cheesy dumplings, Edith is an accomplished cook who thrives on experimenting with her own recipes.

Before Edith pushed her chair away from the table, she had concocted a recipe in her head.

But that was only the beginning. It took a lot of trial and error until Edith thought the dish had just the right amount of seasoning and the dumplings were fluffy instead of on the dry side.

Her husband Nick and son Anthony were happy to devour the experiments and believed she had a winning recipe.

The judges agreed when they tasted her Creamy Chicken-N-Dumpling Medley at the Pennfield Farms Pennsylvania Dutch Chicken Cook-Off held recently in Ephrata. In addition to taste and eye appeal, it met Edith's criteria for easy and quick preparation, and low-fat ingredients.

Before Edith could participate in the cook-off, she had to send in her recipe to be qualifed as a finalist. Only five finalists were selected to compete at the cook-off, which was part of the Pennsylvania Dutch Food Festival sponsored by the Pennsylvania Dutch Convention and Visitors Bureau.

Edith said that she abides by another requirement before she participates in cooking contests. And that is to pray. "I don't do it unless I get the go-ahead from God. After I prayed about this contest, I sensed peace and the feeling that God was saying: 'Go ahead. Use your talent.'"

It isn't the publicity that inspires Edith to enter contests. "It's the challenge," she said. "I always like a challenge."

She won her first cooking contest 17 years ago when she entered the Hershey Apple Pie contest. That time, she won out of 614 entries in the state with her Streusel Apple Pie.

"I don't ever seem to be able to make a recipe like it's printed. I cook more by taste than anything," Edith said.

While her ability to stir up tasty favorites is enjoyed by family and friends, they often find it a bit unsettling as well. After all, how does one duplicate a dish without a recipe?

"Do you think you can put this on paper," is a request often made by her daughter-in-law and other acquaintances.

Edith does what she can to write down recipes for others, but sometimes she herself forgets exactly how she made it.

Growing up with 11 siblings, Edith often admired her mother's cooking skill. Although she helped a bit with cooking, Edith's responsibilities were with milking and field work.

Edith did not have the opportunity to earn a high school diploma because she was needed to work on the farm, but one of her goals is to earn a high school general equivalency degree.

She said of her growing-up years, "Sometimes I felt underprivileged that I couldn't do what other girls were doing because I was needed to work like a hired hand on the farm. But it taught me to stay on a job until finished. I learned a lot and to be independent because I couldn't always run for help when needed."

Born in Russia, Nick and his family became refugees in Germany during the war. The Mennonite Central Committee (MCC) sent his family to Paraguay and eventually to Canada. When Nick was about 25 years old, he wanted to show his appreciation to MCC and volunteered to work at its Akron headquarters for two years. It was there that Edith, who worked in the kitchen, met Nick. The couple married.

After Edith married, she immersed herself in cooking. She especially enjoyed baking breads and rolls.

In addition to son Anthony who still lives at home, the Kampens have four adult children. A son Martin is married and lives in Lititz, a daughter Rosanne is married and lives in Ohio, another daughter Katrina is married and lives in Indiana, and a married son Loren lives in Ephrata.

Cooking challenges aren't always in the form of contests for Edith. In March the Kampens' daughter married and Edith prepared the food for 250 guests.

In addition to the challenge, Edith admits the idea of paying a high price for something she could do herself was part of the motivation. She devised a menu that included Chicken Monterey, gourmet potatoes, a variety of vegetables, homemade rolls, fruit salad, and 30 pies in three different flavors.

As much as possible, Edith prepared the food ahead of time. The dinner rolls were baked and frozen. Pie crusts were made and frozen until the day before the wedding when she filled them with homemade fillings of cherry, of apple and of mandarin orange.

The chicken was marinated, quick-grilled, covered with sauce and frozen ahead of time so that the meat only needed to be baked 30 minutes before serving.

A few days before the event, Edith had access to a commercial potato peeler, which enabled her to peel all the potatoes within 15 minutes. The potatoes were cooked and a sour cream and onion mixture added so that they only needed to be baked before serving.

"It was lots of work, but it brought a lot of satisfaction," Edith said of her ability to meet the challenge.

Only one thing caused a bit of frustration. Many people asked for the recipe for the Chicken Monterey, but Edith had concocted the sauce with her usual dump and taste methods and is having difficulty duplicating it.

Cooking wasn't the only responsibility Edith undertook for the wedding. She also sewed the bride's dress and six flower girl dresses worn by her granddaughters. She attempted to make her own dress, but said, "That was the first time I've even been beat. That material was just too tricky to sew."

In the past, Edith sewed all the clothing worn by family members including her husband's slacks and sport coats.

Extensive flower beds surround the Kampens' home. Her interest in flower and vegetable gardening was spurred on when the children were little and Edith needed "therapeutic" relief from the stress of noisy children in the house.

The Kampens are active at New Covenant Mennonite Church, where Edith helps with the Mom's In Touch program. She tries to attend all of son Anthony's basketball and football games. The Kampens are planning to build a home this year.

Nick, who is a finish carpenter, had plenty of experience in remodeling the home in which they now live.

Edith Kampen devised Creamy Chicken-N-Dumpling Medley to win first prize in the Pennfield Farms Pennsylvania Dutch Chicken Cook-Off.

"When we moved here 23 years ago, we already had four children. The barn was falling down, the house was in terrible shape with a rotting roof. . . ."

Edith begged her husband, "Just give me a nice kitchen, I don't care what the rest of the house looks like."

At first, Nick was reluctant to pour so much effort into a kitchen when so much of the place needed fixing. But he soon grasped the realization that a cook needs an adequate kitchen to prepare meals. And the spacious kitchen Nick put in has made cooking and preserving food enjoyable for Edith.

While some her age are thinking about retirement, Edith has many goals she wants to attain.

She said, "I believe we are put on earth to use our talents. We don't sit home in a rocking chair just because we are grandparents. There's a lot to do that doesn't include going out to make another dollar."

The Kampens enjoy combining traveling and missionary outreach. Because both Nick and Edith enjoyed music immensely, they joined a choir with representatives from 24 different states. The choir memorized words in the native language to present musical programs in Romania, Hungary, and Moldavia.

The Kampens also have traveled to Haiti, Germany, Paraguay, and the West Coast.

For about 12 years, Edith has been a member of the Lancaster Choral Singers, a classical musical group.

Edith's own mother is now 92 years old. Her mother had entered some cooking contests but never won. She is delighted that her daughter is fulfilling her dream.

Here is Edith's prize-winning recipe.

CREAMY CHICKEN-N-DUMPLING MEDLEY

1½ pounds boneless chicken thighs
⅓ cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon seasoned salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon cooking oil
1⅓ cups hot water
1 cup celery, sliced in ¼-inch pieces
½ cup coarsely chopped onion
10½-ounce can cream of mushroom soup
2 cups peas and carrots
1 teaspoon chicken soup base or 1 bouillon cube

Remove skin and all visible fat from chicken. Cut each thigh into 4 or 5 pieces. Mix flour and seasonings in a medium bowl. Add chicken and coat evenly. Pour oil into heavy 10-inch skillet; on medium-high heat, brown chicken. Remove pan from heat, push chicken to one side and remove any remaining oil. Add chicken base, hot water and stir. Bring to a boil; add onion and celery. Cover and simmer on low heat 20 to 25 minutes. If necessary, thaw frozen vegetables and drain.

To prepare dumplings, combine in a medium bowl:

1⅓ cups Bisquick
1 teaspoon cooking oil
3 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
3 teaspoons dry sour cream and onion powder
½ cup lukewarm milk

Mix with fork only until mixture is moist; set aside.

Add mushroom soup, peas and carrots to chicken mixture in skillet; stir gently and heat thoroughly over medium heat. Drop dumplings by round teaspoonfuls evenly over chicken mixture. Cover and cook 12 to 15 minutes. Do not uncover while cooking. If desired, spoon meat and vegetables in a deep serving platter. Carefully place dumplings on top. Garnish with parsley. Serve while hot. Serves 4 to 6.

Note: sour cream and onion powder can be purchased at most bulk food stores or substitute 1 tablespoon sour cream and 1 teaspoon finely chopped onion greens or ¼ teaspoon onion powder. Omit oil.

Extensive flower gardens surround the Kampen home. Here, Edith examines an evening primrose.

Messick Farm Equipment, Inc.

Elizabethtown, PA

Messick Farm Equipment's beginnings go back to November 26, 1952, when two brothers, Marlin and Merville Messick broke ground and erected a new building along Route 230, three miles north of Elizabethtown.

The dealership officially opened on February 1, 1953, with Marlin as Shop Manager, and Merville handling both the sales and parts department.

Two years later a full-time salesman and one additional mechanic were hired, and in 1962 an addition was built to the existing building, housing a showroom and additional parts area.

The successful Messick enterprise once again outgrew its shell, and a new 21-acre site was purchased at the present location along Route 283, at the Rheems Exit, Elizabethtown.

With the new facilities providing 7,200 square feet of shop space, and 6,000 square feet of showroom, Messick celebrated its grand opening in February of 1977. Messicks have since expanded the building twice and have built an additional warehouse.

Today Messick attributes much of its growth to its 46 employees, including 17 mechanics, 12 partsmen, 5 salesmen, and four office personnel.

Factory trained as well as privately instructed, Messick's servicemen have years of experience in the agricultural field. The firm's parts department has experience in providing customers with the correct parts as quickly as possible.

To Messick's staff, the idea of simply making a sale, is secondary to their goal of providing the customer with the correct equipment to get the job done. They are committed to keeping their customers up and running with over 1 million dollars in parts inventory.

Parts & Office

Over 100 years combined experience in the Parts Department with over 1.5 million dollars in parts inventory.

Messicks has a 1-800 number, 1-800-222-3373, also a fax number, 717-367-6662, to be able to provide their services to the customers. They ship and receive by UPS, Federal Express, RPS, Airborne, Motortruck, and via their own 'on the farm' Parts Route Delivery/Sales Truck. Their hours are 7:30-5:00, Monday-Friday, and 7:30-12:00 on Saturdays.

Battle Against Mildew

We look forward to summer and early fall, anticipating sunny blue skies and warm weather. However, we also hope for adequate rain to keep flowers, lawns, and crops growing and productive. Those rainy, humid days do promote productive plant life, but they also can cause problems in the home. The dreaded word is "mildew!"

Mold spores are commonly found in the air — damp, hot, humid summer air. Mildew is a thin, colorful surface growth produced by mold spores that have found the humidity and temperature levels to survive and grow. Dark, poorly ventilated and moisture laden areas offer mildew mold spores a perfect environment to multiply. Basements, closets, and homes in shaded areas are especially vulnerable.

As molds grow they cause considerable damage and often leave a musty odor. They discolor fabrics, walls, wall coverings, leather, and paper. Sometimes they eat into surfaces so severely that they become permanently discolored or actually fall to pieces.

How can mildew be prevented from attacking a home? By providing a good ventilation and the elimination of the causes of dampness.

Ventilation can help prevent moisture from collecting in vulnerable areas in the house. Open windows and doors on dry days to allow air exchange, fans and air conditioners will help. In severe trouble spots, such as basements, dehumidifiers are helpful and sometimes can be very effective. Be sure to empty the water collection pan frequently for best results.

Since mildew collects in dark places, keeping a light bulb lit in a closet or small area can inhibit mold growth. Precaution — check to be sure that the light bulb does not come in close contact with closet contents to avoid the danger of fire!

Check and eliminate the causes of problems outdoors, too. Sometimes, excessive moisture buildup is a result of the building's structure. Make sure drainage is adequate outside of the house, search for cracks in the foundation or outside walls that they may allow water and moisture to penetrate the structure. Also, some very well insulated homes are especially prone to excessive dampness and mildew problems. More venting of inside air could remedy those mildew problems.

Silica gel and calcium chloride and other commercial products will absorb moisture from the air and can be used in small confined areas such as closets or drawers. Follow manufacturers directions for specific uses.

A solution of one cup of chlorine bleach in one gallon of warm water will kill mold spores on surfaces such as bathroom tile or painted surfaces. Always test cleaning products on a small inconspicuous area of painted surfaces to check results. If any discoloration occurs, try an alternate product.

Washable fabrics should be treated immediately by washing in detergent and water. Rinse well and dry in the sun. Remaining stains can be treated by sponging with lemong juice and salt and drying in the sun. Rinse, wash as usual and again, dry in the sun. On intense colored fabric this solution will cause a slight bleaching action, so test first.

Dry cleanable fabrics should be treated by a professional dry cleaner. Identify the stain so they can treat it properly.

It can be a difficult task. But in the long run, taking measures to create an environment that is inhospitable to mold growth in your home is the best course of action!

Crawford County Selects Dairy Royalty

CAMBRIDGE SPRINGS (Crawford Co.) — Heather Marie Riley, 16, of Cambridge Springs, was crowned the 1997 Crawford Co. Dairy Princess during the 24th Annual Crawford Co. Dairy Princess Pageant. The pageant was held June 21 at the Cochranton Community Church on Route 285. About 200 people attended the pageant and the all-you-can-eat ice cream social that followed in the fellowship hall.

A former Dairy Maid, Heather is the daughter of Donna Riley and a student at Cambridge Springs High School. She works at Closkey Dairy Farm, which is owned by her grandparents. She was escorted by Brian Myers.

In September, Heather will compete with 32 other county Dairy Princesses at Harrisburg for the title of Pennsylvania State Dairy Princess.

Selected as Crawford County Alternate Dairy Princess was Alicia Lynn Dengler, 16 of Saegertown. The saegertown High School student is a daughter of Chris and Laura Dengler and is also a former dairy maid. She was escorted by her father.

Other princess contestants who will now serve as dairy maids are Holly Manross 16, Saegertown, daughter of Paul and Connie Manross; and Brenda Smith, 17, Centerville, daughter of Joyce Smith.

They will serve as dairy maids along with Eula Shreve, 14, Canadohta Lake, daughter of Marshall and Karen Shreve; and Jennie Campbell, 16, Conneaut Lake, daughter of Jennifer Campbell and the late James Campbell.

The sanctuary was decorated in purple. Flower girl was Rachael Irwin of Linesville, daughter of Matt and Dorothy Irwin. Mistress of ceremonies was Rhonda Kieklak of Erie County, last year's State Dairy Princess.

Among the princess contestants, Heather won the best skit award and Alicia won the best speech award.

Committee members were quoted as saying that the competition was very close. Any of the four Princess contestants would have made an excellent county princess. As a team all six girls will represent the dairy industry.

Heather and Alicia will attend a training seminar July 7 through 10 at Lycoming College along with princesses and alternates from around the state. The dairy maids will be trained at a one-day seminar on August 1.

An honored guest at the pageant was Jan Harding, director of the Dairy Princess and Promotion Services in Pennsylvania. She gave remarks from the podium. Also among honored guests were 14 area commodity queens and former members of dairy royalty from Crawford and surrounding counties.

Judges were Janet Gibas, Janet Gregor and Charlie Ruslavage.

Contestants showed their public speaking ability by presenting their skits and speeches for the audience. The last portion of the competition was the impromptu question. Judges were excused to determine the final outcome while Merideth Ann Weiderspahn, 17, Cochranton, daughter of Francis and Cheryl Weiderspahn took the stage for the last time as Crawford County Dairy Princess. She presented her farewell remarks and thanked the committee, dairy maids, parents and brother for their cooperation in helping her reach thousands of people with the dairy message during their 355 promotions in the past year. Each outgoing Dairy Maid has completed between 35 and 40 promotions.

Merideth is also the Pennsylvania State First Alternate Dairy Princess. As such, she has completed 63 state promotions to date in addition to her county events. She will retain her state title and continue to promote on the state level until the state pageant in September in Harrisburg. She will be a freshman at Geneva College in Beaver Falls in September majoring in elementary education.

One of the highlights of the evening was a slide presentation by Merideth showing highlights of her life-long involvement on the dairy farm and of her dual reign this year. The slide presentation was entitled "A Modern-Day Princess Fairy Tale."

Merideth concluded with these thoughts. "I will consider my reigns a success if I was able to communicate to the public the importance of agriculture, especially the dairy industry, in Pennsylvania. Farmers are having a difficult time right now making a living because milk prices are low. We all need to support the dairy farmers by buying and consuming real dairy products. If we work together to put real dairy products on the table at every meal, milk prices will rise, and we will have a healthier America."

To book an appearance by the new royalty, call Anna Marie Labowski at (814) 644-3243.

Celebrate summer's best flowers, vegetables, fruits, and garden ornamentals. The Penn State Master Gardeners are hosting the first annual open garden tour on Saturday, July 12, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Visitors seldom get a chance to see the gardens of a master gardener. Tour the eight private and two public demonstration gardens in York city, Spring Grove, Hellam and Jacobus area. See a variety of gardens designed for food and fun.

The Penn State Master Gardeners enjoy sharing their gardening skills with herbs, ornamental grasses, fruit trees, vegetables, sensory plants, herbs, garden sculptures and much more. Step through the backgate and try to identify the myster plant at each garden. Identify it using its vernacular or botanical name.

The garden tour is another example of York Counties volunteers sharing their love of gardening with children and adults. Visit one or all the gardens. A $5 per person donation is requested to be dropped off at the first tour stop.

Gardens on tour include the following:

•Julie Bear, 655 Stillcreek Lane, York, (Hellam area) features a new yard with old-time character. This garden produces fruits and vegetables for the family as well as for wildlife visitors. This garden is a natural habitat certified garden.

•Sherry Rishel, 3330 Oakham Drive, Penn Oaks, York, created an annual and perennial garden display backdropped with a white picket fence. See garden favorites like astilbe, sedges, vines, and grasses. See a wisteria swagged pergola and dry shade loving plants like Microbiota and sarococca.

•The children at Phineas Davis Elementary School, 300 S Ogontz Street, York, invited you to tour their 'seedbuster's 4-H Club garden.' Fifty children planted and maintained the vegetable and flower garden. Monster pumpkins are growing in the center of the garden guarded by scarecrows built by the children.

•The Sensory Garden at the Blind Center of York County, 1380 Spahn Avenue, York, (Spring Garden Township), serves those who are blind or visually impaired. A water garden and raised herd bed are surrounded by flowers, shrubs and trees both fragrant and colorful. Bring your gardening questions on growing herbs.

•Jacquie Briercheck, 164 Springdale Road, York, features new displays annually. Delight in the cottage-style gardens bordering a grass pathway with roses, perennials, scented geraniums, and herbs. Look closely for tomatoes and peppers among the beds. Sit in the shade and cool down from the summer's heat.

•Donna Wallace, 8 Hillside Drive, Jacobus, has a hidden garden behind the house. See shade gardens with hostas, hellabores, and foxgloves. Don't miss the patio plants, trellis climbers, and other plants attracting toads, birds and butterflies. See plenty of perennial beds and ornamental grasses and guess the local source of the unique sandstone sculptures.

•Jean Ann Lehman, RR 1 Box 1130B, Keeney Road, Spring Grove, features a quaint cottage surrounded by country gardens, nestled in a woodland setting. The modest plot contains a gazebo, a collection of conifers, rhododendrons and hosta. Find out what's in the 'secret garden."

Berry Time

The best of summer fruits such as raspberries and blueberries can be picked fresh from the field, found along roadside stands or purchased at your local market.

Now is the time to preserve berries for off-season eating. Except for blueberries, freeze berries that day of harvest for best quality. Refrigerate blueberries one or two days to improve their flavor, then preserve them. Select berries with fresh sweet flavor, deep colors, and firm textures, but of ideal maturity for eating fresh.

Remove blossoms and stems if appropriate. Wash one or two quarts at a time and drain. Do not soak berries.

Don't freeze more than two pounds of food per cubic foot of freezer capacity per day. Berries may be packed with syrup or dry sugar.

To make a syrup pack, mix and dissolve 2½ cups sugar in 4 cups water. Add 1 cup of this syrup per quart of prepared fruit.

To make a dry pack, mix ½ cup dry sugar per quart of prepared fruit. To package, fill pint- or quart-size freezer bags to 3 to 4 inches from their tops, and squeeze out air. Leave 1-inch headspace, seal, label, and freeze. Before freezing, bags may be inserted into reusable rigid plastic freezer containers for added protection against punctures and leakage.

Berry recipes are usually interchangeable. So if you a particularly scrumptious recipe for blueberry coffee cake, you may want to try raspberries instead.

1 cup buttermilk
1 cup wild blueberries

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Spray 12 3-inch muffin tins with non-stick cooking spray.

In a large bowl, combine whole wheat flour, white flour, wheat germ, bran, baking powder, baking soda, and salt. In another bowl, beat the egg, maple syrup, oil, and ginger until well blended. Pour the buttermilk and the egg-maple syrup mixture over the dry ingredients; stir just until moistened. Gently fold in the blueberries. Divide the batter among the muffin tins; bake 20 to 25 minutes. Let cool in pan.

Most of us have experienced it, at one time or another.

We dial a telephone number to a business or an organization. After a brief ring, we are greeted to an answer that says something like: "Thank you for calling XYZZ Corporation. If you wish to place an order, press 1. If you wish to make an inquiry about our products, press 2. If you wish to access your account information, press 3. If you wish to speak with an operator (gosh, a real person!), press 4." Etc, etc.

Okay, so none of the above suits the reason we've called XYZZ Corporation. We do need to talk to a real person. So we press 4.

And get this: "Thank you for calling XYZZ Corporation. All our operators are currently busy. Your call will be taken in the order received. Please stay on the line. Your call is important to us."

Which is followed, while you wait, by the playing in your ear of what I've always described as "elevator music." Some background composition that, after a couple of minutes, will work its way into your subconscious and aggravatingly play itself back to you for the rest of the day. Or, even more irritating, commercials about the firm holding up progress in your day. (If we wanted commercials, for goodness' sake, we'd turn on the TV or radio).

And you wait. And you wait.

Periodically, another electronic voice comes on the line and intones: "All our operators are currently busy. Please stay on the line. Your call is important to us."

After six or eight minutes, we may wonder just how important this call can be to them, anyway?

Aware, however, that this is progress in the electronic age — and only likely to become more commonplace in the future — we grow resigned, though weary, of the telephone queing up. And plan ahead by having some sort of paperwork to do, a magazine to leaf through, or maybe just by watching the peace-symbol doves bullying the other birds away from the backporch birdfeeder.

Believing that we, too, must stay abreast of progress, this farm business is debating the installation of such an answering device to replace our single message machine that reminds our callers — before the beep to leave their name and number — to drink their milk.

So don't be too surprised if, at some point in the future, you call here and get an answer of something like: "Thank you for calling the Bupp farm. If you are calling...

•to tell us that an equipment part we badly need is stuck somewhere on a truck dock in Cleveland, please press 1;

•to ask us to participate in some lengthy survey about our farming operation, press 2;

•to inform us about an opportunity to sign up for your company's latest credit card, press 3;

•to try to sell us siding ... or storm windows ... or pens with our farm name ... or light bulbs, press 4;

•to ask us to contribute to some charitable organization we've never heard of, press 5'

•to ask us to switch long-distance carriers, press 6;

•to inquire if I know where "The Farmer" is (and then get aggravated when I don't), press 7;

•to ask if you can talk to "the person in charge of making purchases," press 8;

•as a computer that will automatically kick in with some electronic sales pitch, press 9;

•to inform us that we have cattle outside a fence, are getting some refund or have won the Publisher's Clearing House sweepstakes, please stay on the line. You call is very important to us and we want to talk to YOU in person."

And, by the way. We won't play "elevator music" while you wait.

We'll play "rap."

If we're going to annoy you anyway, we might as well do it right.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

We have two children who live in Atlanta, Georgia. They are close enough to each other to babysit each other's children who are close to the same age.

The one family just returned from a vacation in Puerto Rico. There they traveled over winding mountain roads, visited caves, and rented a "wave-jumper" for a day. The country is a study in different economic levels.

Our son has a doctor's degree in soil chemistry. He is a person blessed with many talents. In high school he made a Grandfather's clock, a gun cabinet, and a beautiful walnut coffee table. He used wood from our farm that we had stored on rafters in the barn to dry. Now he intends to take a load of cherry wood from our farm to Georgia to make wainscoting for his family room. Besides putting in a new kitchen and a new bathroom, he finds time to tend his two children. You see, he is a house husband as his wife enjoys her job as an engineer.

We have a daughter near Atlanta who calls me on the telephone every Tuesday morning. They are remodeling their kitchen and family room so that is the main point of discussion just now. Although, most of the time, or so it seems, she is telling me about her garden. And, they are always ahead of my gardens. They are eating peaches, sweet corn, and tomatoes now. Always their crops are ready earlier than ours. But for some reason both of us are picking blueberries at the same time. We freeze some, eat some fresh, and make jam.

It is nice to keep in touch with your children and share their lives.

Kids Garden At School

BETH MILLER
Cumberland Co. Correspondent

CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.) — The courtyard of the Hamilton Elementary School is a lot more colorful, and a lot better for the environment recently.

That is because the students of the school used their green thumbs this past school year.

With help from the Alliance for the Chesapeake Bay, the children in kindergarten through fifth grade created a plant-filled garden in the center courtyard of their school.

Don Showers was one of those kids who got to play in the dirt.

"I liked learning about all the different flowers," he said.

He and the other pupils had plenty of different flowers to learn about.

The color garden that was planted by the kindergarteners and first graders included flowers like the Black-eyed Susan, Moonbeam and the great blue lobelia.

As with the other students, the main purpose for creating their garden was to teach the children the importance of conservation and how to prepare and plant gardens.

All of the gardens were designed to be low maintenance. They all contain beneficial plants that have uses for people and also attract wildlife.

The second graders raised their own wildlife to put in their garden. They raised three butterflies in the classroom, then released them in their newly-planted garden.

Those butterflies got to enjoy plants like blue false indigo, bee balm, cardinal flower, parsley fennel, and gloriosa daisies.

The third graders studied erosion factors as part of their gardening project. They saw how sandy soil affects ornamental grasses that grow in those kinds of environments.

The perennial ornamental grasses in their garden included yarrow, plume grass, switch grass, hairgrass, blue oat grass and Indian grass.

Creating a fern garden was the big job for the fourth graders who learned by incorporating common woodland plants into their project.

They planted wood ferns, sweet woodruff, ostrich fern, white wood aster, sensitive fern, cinnamon fern, royal fern and creeping phlox.

The oldest kids at the school, the fifth graders got to plant an herb garden. To do that, they studied about how herbs can be used to make medicines and fragrances, and how they can be turned into dyes.

The plants they put in their garden included chamomile, coriander, lavender, Russian sage, marigold, thyme, sweet marjoram, garlic, chervil, and chive.

This was a school project where everybody learned something and everybody had fun at the same time.

Brandon Shipsook said he just enjoyed "being outside with nature."

"We helped the first graders and I really enjoyed helping other people and helping the environment," said Catrine Hall.

Lindsay Hench thought about how these gardens will be enjoyed by people for years to come.

"The gardens will always be here," Lindsay said. "They will always make me feel a part of this school, that I helped plant this."

Hamilton Elementary 5th graders put the finishing touches on their courtyard garden.

Camp Teaches Farm Safety

KAREN BUTLER
Maryland Correspondent

JEFFERSON, Md. — Jane Smith is a woman with a mission. She wants to bring a message to farm youth everywhere about the potential dangers around them, and to help prevent farm accidents. "If we can save just one life, then it's all been worthwhile, said Mrs. Smith, safety chairman for the Frederick County Farm Bureau, referring to the "Safety Camp 4 Just Kids" that she founded.

Now in its fourth year, the camp has delivered information on safety to hundreds of youth aged 8-13 throughout Frederick and surrounding counties. As evidence of the program's popularity, this year the 60 openings filled up quickly and a waiting list had to be formed. The camp is sponsored by Frederick County Farm Bureau, Farm Bureau Women, and many other organizations and individuals. It is held at the Frederick County 4-H Camp Center in Jefferson.

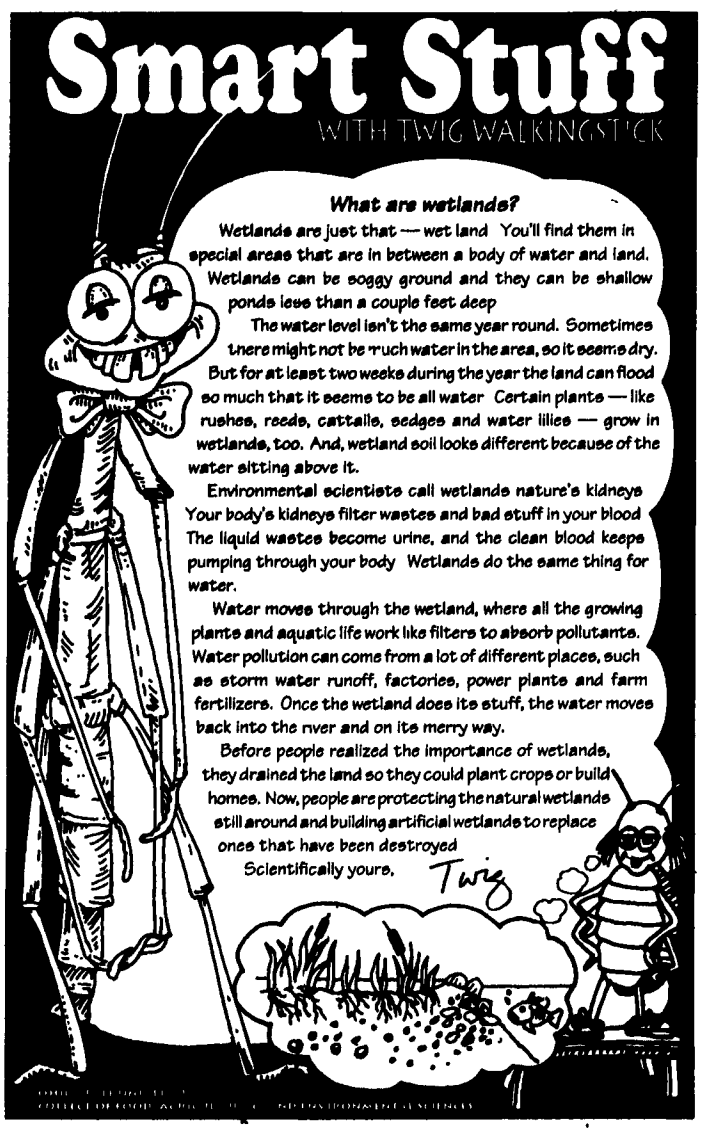
Mrs. Smith saw the need for a safety camp as the result of a heartwrenching series of accidents in her community. A little boy suffocating in a gravity flow wagon, a manure spreader fatality, a boy who drowned in a farm pond, one who drowned in a swimming pool, a sledding accident, and other tragic farm accidents motivated her to take action. "Putting this all together, you try to think, can we make a difference, can we do something? And from that we branched off into forming a committee and going with our first camp," said Mrs. Smith, "That one was so successful we've had three overnights and one day camp."

Campers arrived in the evening and checked into their cabins. They received farm safety T-shirts and played get acquainted games. Then there was a class on bicycle safety and a hands-on workshop where they made their own fire extinguishers. Following a fire safety lesson, ghost stories were told around a camp fire.

The following morning the children learned about sun safety, lawn mower safety, and seat belts, and airbags. The morning's classes were punctuated by a graphic lesson on tractor and machinery safety given by farmers who themselves had been involved in accidents. In the afternoon there were lessons by a farm vet on animal safety, and by members of the Frederick County dive team on water safety.

4-H youth serving as camp counselors were: Amy Jo Harshman, Crystal Smith, Gary Shankle, and Bradley Smith. Safety Commitee members and other volunteers helping at the camp were: Jane Smith, Mary Jane Roop, Peggy Garst, Lisa Gaver, Wayne and Jenny Rhoderick, Mike and Evelyn Wilcom, Ruth Lenhart, Brenda Nowell, Betsy Herbst, and Brenda Legget.

Kitchen help was provided by Laverne Heffner and her assistants. Marshall Savage, caretaker at the 4-H camp center, also helped with the camp.



Smart Stuff
WITH TWIG WALKINGSTICK
What are wetlands?
Wetlands are just that — wet land. You'll find them in special areas that are in between a body of water and land. Wetlands can be soggy ground and they can be shallow ponds less than a couple feet deep.
The water level isn't the same year round. Sometimes there might not be much water in the area, so it seems dry. But for at least two weeks during the year the land can flood so much that it seems to be all water. Certain plants — like rushes, reeds, cattails, sedges and water lilies — grow in wetlands, too. And, wetland soil looks different because of the water sitting above it.
Environmental scientists call wetlands nature's kidneys. Your body's kidneys filter wastes and bad stuff in your blood. The liquid wastes become urine, and the clean blood keeps pumping through your body. Wetlands do the same thing for water.
Water moves through the wetland, where all the growing plants and aquatic life work like filters to absorb pollutants. Water pollution can come from a lot of different places, such as storm water runoff, factories, power plants and farm fertilizers. Once the wetland does its stuff, the water moves back into the river and on its merry way.
Before people realized the importance of wetlands, they drained the land so they could plant crops or build homes. Now, people are protecting the natural wetlands still around and building artificial wetlands to replace ones that have been destroyed.
Scientifically yours,
Twig

When attention is needed, you'll be alerted either visually or audibly. Just another way GLEANER combines are engineered for better returns.

A Tattletale III

Monitors the speeds and signals when a function has slowed down or stopped.

B Tattletale V

This warning system monitors the engine and other important features and warns both by an audible alarm and warning light. It even tells you when the grain tank is full.

- Engine Overload Alarm
  Alerts you with an audible alarm when the engine rpm has dropped 100 rpm below rated speed. And tells you when the combine efficiency has cropped.
- Bin Level Monitor
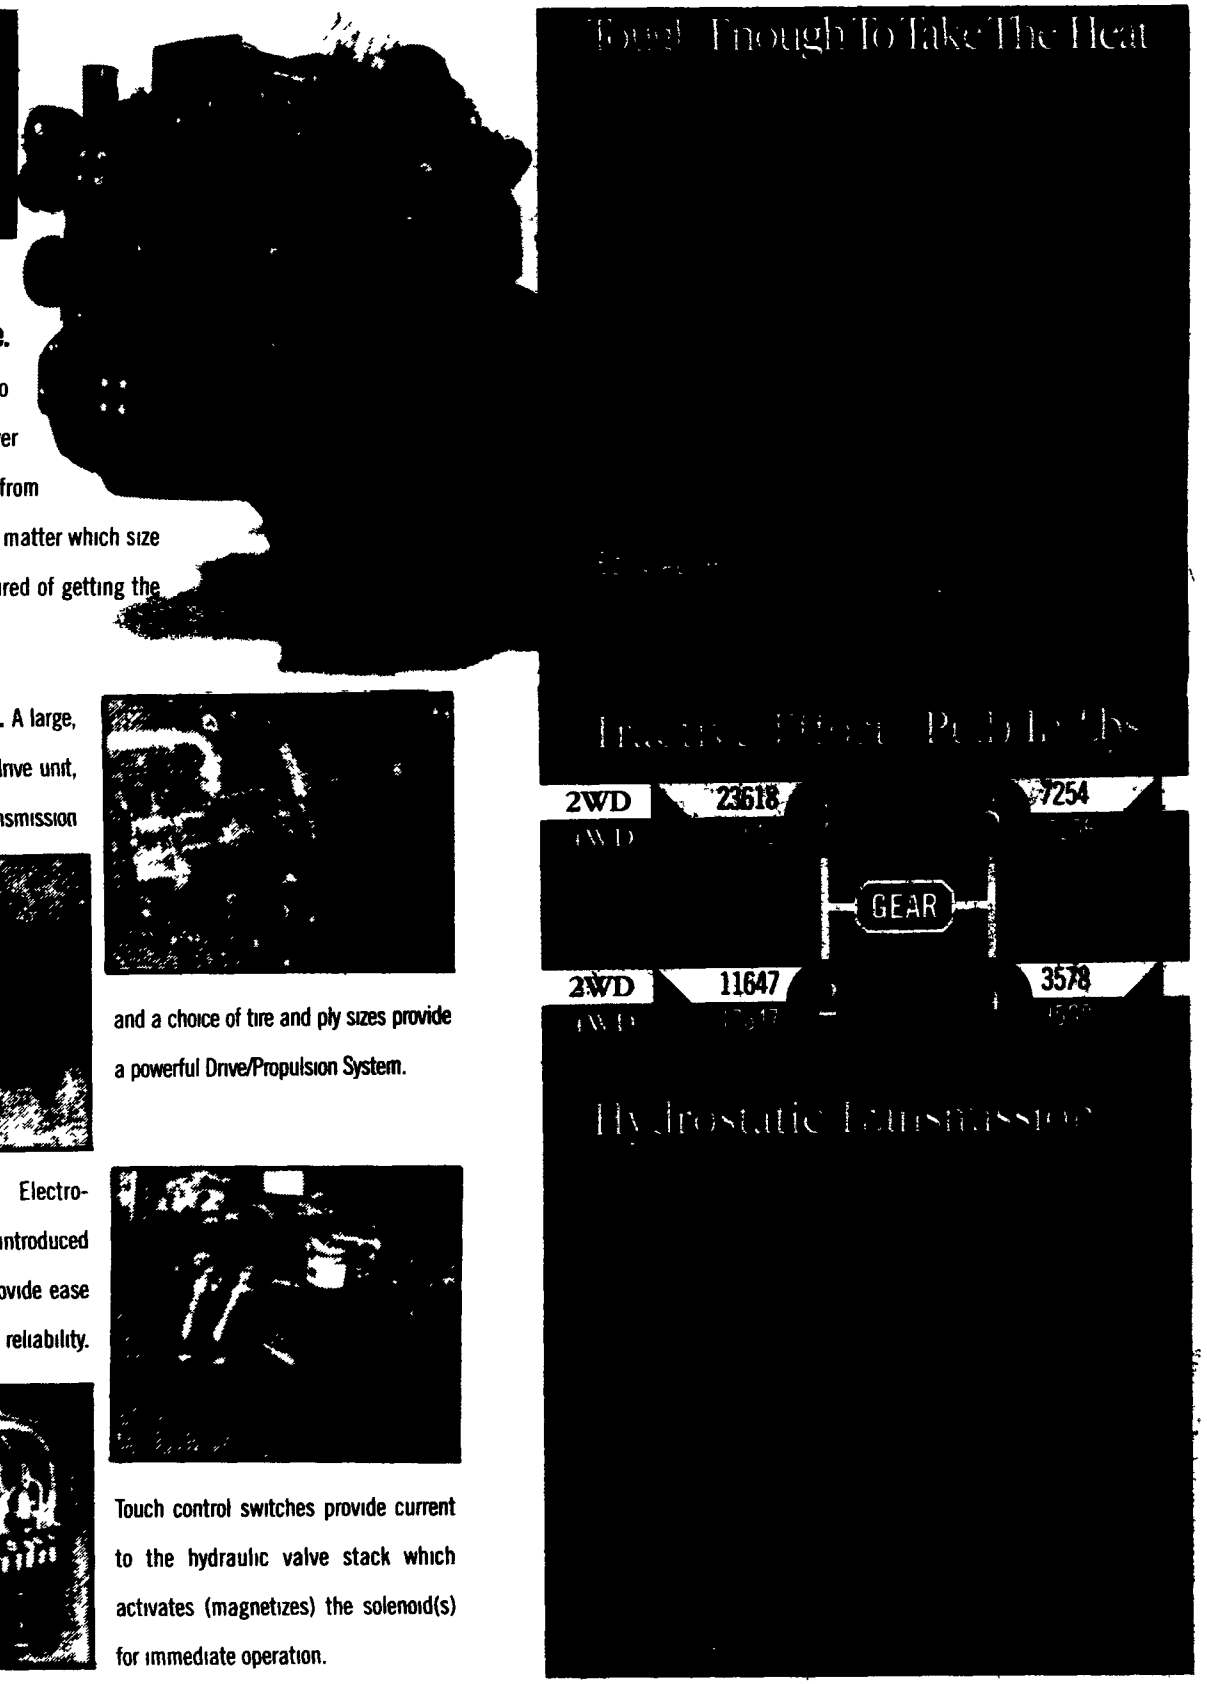
  Lets you know when the bin is full or near full. Sensors in the grain tank can be set to your specifications.

C Oil pressure, Oil/Collant Temperature and Voltage Meter

These gauges are in addition to the same functions monitored on Tattletale V but with separate sending units to give you added reliability and performance.



Cummins® Diesel Engine. With this engine, you get to choose the kind of horsepower you want. Just take your pick from the 185 to 330 hp engine No matter which size you go with, you can be assured of getting the most power for your money.

Drive/Propulsion System. A large, high-torque, split hydrostatic drive unit, coupled with a four-speed transmission and a choice of tire and ply sizes provide a powerful Drive/Propulsion System.

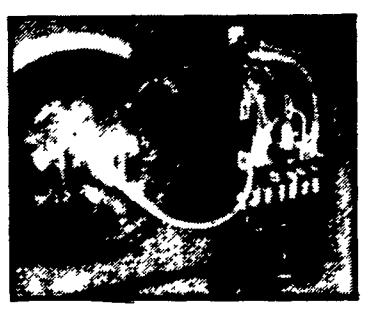
Hydraulic System. Electro-hydraulic controls were first introduced by GLEANER in 1972 and provide ease of operation with exceptional reliability.



Touch control switches provide current to the hydraulic valve stack which activates (magnetizes) the solenoid(s) for immediate operation.

Fashion, Modeling, Sewing Skills Advance Seamstresses To State Competition

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Months of sewing, ripping, and fitting by more than 70 4-H'ers awed the crowd gathered for the Southeast Regional 4-H Fashion Revue on Monday evening.

Representatives who survived the first round of competition on the county level qualified for the regional competition. Participants from nine counties appeared before a panel of six judges, who needed to select nine finalists to advance to state competition.

Workshops included professional modeling instruction during the afternoon session. The event concluded with the 71 4-H'ers providing a fashion show for parents and community persons.

Dr. Gary San Julian, regional director, thanked parents and volunteers for gentle and not so gentle nudges that, he said, is behind every successful 4-H'er.

The purpose of the 4-H Fashion Revue is to build self-confidence and poise; develop skills in planning, slecting, and making clothing; select appropriate accessories, develop good posture, grooming, and punctuality habits; complete applications clearly and submit them on time; acquire knowledge and skills in planning, presenting, and participating in fashion revues.

The nine finalists selected to represent the state include the following:

• Kristina Futty who created a prom gown made from laime satin with a velvet bodice outlined with black beading. Kristina also made a wrap from chiffon and made a matching vest for her cousin Jonathan who accompanied her on stage. The vest had welt pockets, buttons in the front and a belt in the back.

Kristina is from Chester County, where she was graduated from Oxford High School with high honors. Kristina will attend Messiah College this fall.

• Karina Price from Montgomery County modeled a crushed panne velvet dress with a lace-trimmed underdress of batiste. Her original idea came from a catalog. She combined and altered three patterns to create the simple elegant look. The midnight blue is offset by antiqued buttons and the contrasting ecru edging showing from the buttom of the dress. Although Karin has had experience creating special designs, this is the first time she worked with stretch velvet and specialty trims.

• Ellen Nave from Horsham in Montgomery County modeled her outfit that included relaxed-fit, five pocket jeans in Calvin Klein's newest design and a yoke shirt.

Ellen will be in ninth grade at Philmont Christian Academy in the fall where she plays sports and the flute.

• Jenn Braun also from Montgomery County made a maroon, navy, and gold striped wool outfit for her eight project with the Harley Hill Stitchers. She used the three colors in the vest, and the navy wool for the fitted pants and tailored jacket. She found that pressing is the most important detail when tailoring.

Jenn will be a senior at The Baldwin School in the fall.

• Julie Lichtenwalner of Lehigh County stitched a close-fitting gown with princess seams and a back zipper. White pleated shoulder straps and a back bow added a nice touch. The royal blue, washable satinette dress included boning.

Julie is 17 years old and will be in 12th grade. She is a member of school band, chorus, and church choir.

• Dana Schrantz from Bethlehem, Northampton County selected a dark teal polyester jacquard to make her fully lined, machine washable prom gown.

She altered the pattern to move the zipper from the center back to the left side to give the gown a cleaner, smoother appearance. Six spaghetti straps, three over each shoulder, criss-crossed in the back.

• Cayce Bean could use no pins, no backstitching, and no second changes when she sewed a suede jacket. The color blocked jacket in forest green, burgundy, and navy featured a specialty topstitched yoke and exposed zipper. It was further accented with a contrasting collar, cuffs, and welt pockets. Cayce's A-lined skirt featured topstitching at all seams. Both the jacket and skirt were fully lined. Cayce used the serger to create a coordinating polyester turtleneck.

Cayce who is from Schwenksville in Montgomery County will be a sophomore at Christopher Dock this fall.

• Josh Folk of Leesport was the only male winner. His khati trousers featured a buttoned waistband, front pleats, side pockets, a fly zipper, and a back welt pocket.

His navy blue cotton shirt has a collar, back yoke, back pleats, short sleeves, and front pocket.

He made a paisley tie to complete his outfit.

Josh is treasurer of the Leesport 4-H Club and is a member of the Berks County Rabbit Club and a camp counselor this year. He is a sophomore at Tolpehocken High School where participates in golf, track, and FFA.

• Oralyn Folk, president of the Leesport 4-H Club, stitced a three-piece ensemble. The jacket is made of a polyester, rayon, and linen fabric. The button-down sleeveless shirt has front darts and ties in the back. The pants are a free-flowing from an elastic waist.

Oralyn will be a junior at Tulpehocken High School where she participates in basketball, track, FFA, and student council. She is also a 4-H camp counselor.

'Special Agent' To President Is Somerset Dairy Princess

Jessica Lynch, center, on June 28 was named the 1997-98 Somerset County Dairy Princess. Lindsay Leigh Baker, left, and Katie Shaulis are both alternates.

-GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

SOMERSET (Somerset Co.) — When the president, upon revealing that his breakfast lacked "Real" dairy foods, found himself impaled to the wall by his no-nonsense, special agent, the commander-in-chief knew his diet would have to be amended by including milk in it.

Not only that, but Jessica Lynch from Friedens, the new Somerset County Dairy Princess, acting in behalf of the dairy industry, told the first lady how women who don't drink adequate amounts of milk, are endangering the health of their bone structure in years to come with the disease "osteoporosis."

The trench-coated, special agent advised the residents of the White House, as well, that their child must be served generous amounts of milk and other dairy products each day.

The child's growing body needs the vitamins and minerals found in milk for strength, energy, and normal development.

A 312-acre dairy farm, Lyncholm Holsteins, supports about 300 head of dairy and beef cattle, and is operated by Gary and Nancy Lynch, Jessica's parents.

Three times a day approximately 200 head are milked and Miss Lynch is expected to also do her share of the work.

Active in 4-H and numerous farm organizations in the county, as well as her church and school, the teenager wants to attend Penn State to study for a career with the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) or the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA).

A scholarship of $1,000 was presented to Miss Lynch. Alternates Katie Shaulis and Lindsay Leigh Baker each received a savings bond of $250.

The three young women participated in the 31st Somerset County Dairy Princess Pageant where Miss Shaulis, a Rockwood Area High School graduate headed this fall to West Chester University, was named Miss Congeniality.

In her "Got Milk Patrol," skit, an offender who brought a non-dairy product into the Dairy Zone, barely escaped arrest by the uniformed officer. After hearing his promise to join the Milk MOOvement, Shaulis relented and said she would give him an-UDDER chance.

Visitors to Dairyland were warmly welcomed by an engaging Dairy Fairy — Miss Baker.

At the Berlin-Brothersvalley High School she is a junior.

Signs lead to the pleasant place where happy Holsteins flew about, but because Dairyland had extremely high standards, parking in the dairy paradise was restricted. Only holders of the "Real Seal" or those who openly displayed it could park there was the gentle word from the kind fairy.

Master of ceremonies was Bob Brown, director of the Somerset County Cooperative Extension office, who obviously enjoyed the Little Miss Pageant interviews with children.

Little Miss participants and escorts were Laura Horning, Melissa Paul, Rochelle Gossman, Samuel Shober, Jeffrey Meier, and Andrew Singo.

Dairy maids Bethany Seifert, Kristi Michael, Katie Stutzman, Jill Rohrbaugh, Missy Powell, Rebekah Fox, and Jill Fox, were introduced.

Miss Lynch was crowned by Amanda Meier, the outgoing Somerset County dairy princess.

Desirae Hillegass, the 1996 alternate dairy princess called the door prize winners.

Judging the event, from Bedford County was Susan Shankle; Cambria County, Maria Lieb; Westmoreland County, Libby Marker.

The dairy princess committee members are Angie Shober, chairperson; Brenda Slingluff, Stephanie Gebhardt, Kelly Bittner and Vicki Hay

4-H'ers Bring Joy To Elders

Six members of the North Jackson Ag 4-H Club are completing cake decorating projects. The project includes completion of a 4-H project record book as well as exhibiting a decorated cake at roundup, which is to be held at the upcoming Harford Fair.

Recently, these six members got together in leader Denise Pease's kitchen to practice their decorating skills. With the help of Elizabeth Graves, a cake decorator from Clarks Summit, the members decorated a total of seven cakes.

The 4-H'ers participating are Heather Pease of Susquehanna, Kendal Miller of Jermyn, Sarah Graves of Clarks Summit, Katie and Abby Onyon of New Milford, and Dan Frechen of Susquehanna.

After decorating was completed, dishes washed, and icing wiped up from everywhere, the members kicked back to enjoy looking at one another's masterpieces. They decided previously, as a community service, that it would be nice to share all of those calories with somebody. The Allied Nursing Home in Scranton was chosen.

After packing seven cakes in the car, the youth and some helping moms arrive at the nursing home. Delighted smiles began appearing on many faces of the residents at Allied as the kids showed off their accomplishments. After carving their creations, the 4-H'ers served more than 50 elderly people.

Amanda Daugherty Reigns In York County

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — Amanda Daugherty is York County's newest dairy princess.

Her crowning was the highlight of the annual county dairy princess pageant, held June 28 at the 4-H Center. She will represent York County's dairy industry as a spokesperson for the next 12 months, continuing a tradition as the 39th dairy princess named in the county since 1955.

Amanda, 16, is the daughter of Philip and Terry Daugherty, 2135 Lemon Street, York. The Daugherty family operates a 35-head milking herd, with 250 acres of corn, hay and small grains. Amanda is employed on the family farm, assisting with milking and other chores.

A senior at New Freedom Christian School, Amanda plans to attend college with a major in preveterinary studies. She participates in volleyball, softball, and soccer and is a member of the York 4-H Beef Club.

"I'm looking forward to going to schools, especially the elementary schools," said Amanda of her dairy promotion plans for the upcoming year.

During the pageant program, Amanda performed a puppet and storybook presentation geared toward children of pre-school age and gave a speech on how milk's nutrition benefits people of varying age groups. In answer to a "fishbowl" question about how she would react to being called a "farmer's daughter," Amanda replied that she would point out the extra privileges and opportunities afforded children who grow up in a farm environment. She noted that she would further emphasize that, if it were not for farmers, people would not have much to eat or drink.

Supporting Amanda in her promotion efforts will be one of the county's largest-ever court of assistants, including five dairy maids, one dairy miss and two l'il misses. Dairy maids are Heather Crowl, Stormi Greek, Jessica Pomraning, and sisters Janet and Jessica Yohe. As part of the pageant program, each of the dairy maid candidates gave a brief, original presentation on milk and its nutritive benefits.

Heather Crowl, 15, is the daughter of Joyce and Ellis Crowl, Airville. She is a former participant in the dairy maid and miss programs and a member of the Milk-N-Money 4-H dairy club. A sophomore at Red Lion Area High School, Heather is a member of the FFA and an honor roll student.

Stormi Greek, 13, is the daughter of Bonnie and Leonard Greek, Delta. She is a former dairy miss and a Milk-N-Money 4-H dairy club member. Stormi is a freshman at Red Lion Area High School, where she is a member of the cheerleading squad, and a dance student.

Also returning as a dairy maid and former dairy miss is Jessica Pomraning, 15. Jessica is the daughter of Teresa and Myron Pomraning, Delta. She is a Milk-N-Money 4-H dairy club member and active in the bandfront and musical activities at Red Lion Area High School, where she is a junior.

Jessica Yohe and Janet Yohe are the daughters of Jerry and Kathy Yohe, York R10. Jesica, 15, is a sophomore at Spring Grove Area High School where she participates in volleyball, track and field. She is employed part time at the Stump Acres Dairy Farm, working both in the raw milk store and with other farm responsibilities as needed.

Janet Yohe, 13, is a freshman at Spring Grove Area High School, and plays on the basketball and volleyball teams. She also enjoys music and plays the viola. Janet is employed at Stump Acres Dairy Farm, where she has assisted with the milking since she was nine years old, and sometimes helps with the raw milk sales.

Stevie Anna Greek is the dairy miss. Stevie Anna, 6, is the daughter of Bonnie and Leonard Greek, Delta. She will be a first grader in the fall at Clearview Elementary School. She is a student of dance and also enjoys helping milk the family's 52-head Holstein herd.

Frankie Greek and Amber Thomas were named l'il dairy misses. Frankie, 5, is the daughter of Bonnie and Leonard Greek, Delta, and will attend kindergarten at Clearview Elementary School. Like her sisters, she enjoys dance lessons. Amber Thoman, 3, is the daughter of Gail and Gary Thoman, Dallastown, and enjoys being involved with whatever farm activities the family is engaged in doing.

Tanya Thoman, outgoing dairy princess, reviewed her year of promotion and how it grew from her lifelong love of living on a dairy farm. She noted that she dipped a lot of ice cream during her reign, especially at one particular school promotion for 300 children. Tanya expressed special thanks to Dallastown High School and her employer, Brown's Orchard Retail Market, for their cooperation in allowing her to have time to fulfill her many dairy princess obligations.

Emcee for the pageant was 93rd District Representative and state legislative Agriculture Committee member Mike Waugh, New Freedom. Members of the York County Dairy Promotion Committee, which organized the pageant, include Gail Thoman, coordinator and booking chairman, Patty Greek-Jones, secretary, and Bonnie Jo Greek, treasurer.

Rain Didn't Slow Competitors

It rained hard on Sunday, May 25, but that didn't deter the competitors at KA Equestrian Center's Horse Show in Cochranville (part of a show series being held between KA Equestrian Center and Grazing Acres Farm in New London).

A few classes were held indoors, but most were outside in rain that ranged from gentle to not-so-gentle.

The pleasure division drew the most entries and cash prizes were awarded to the first three place finishers in each class.

Claiming two first places in pleasure were Angel, ridden by Joanne Kricker of North East, Md., and High Wheeler, ridden by Fiona Gowers of Newark, Del. Short stirrup (for ages 12 and under) was another large division, with two wins going to Ashley Parker of West Grove riding Hakuma Matata.

A new award this year recognizes the trainer bringing the most competitors to the KA Equestrian Center — Grazing Acres Horse Shows. (Dawn McCuen of KA Equestrian is excluding herself from this competition.) A trainer who brings a large group to one show has as good a chance of winning as a trainer with fewer entries over several shows, and vice versa.

Shows are selected for July 13 and October 12 at KA Equestrian Center on Derry Meeting Road in Cochranville, and on June 15 and September 7 at Grazing Acres Farm on New London-Lewisville Road in New London.

Keys To Farm Safety: Prevention, Education, Planning

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

BERLIN (Somerset Co.) — A farmer, in his business, is like any worker who hopes never to experience a work-related accident. He must think smart, make rules, and follow them.

Beyond knowing how to punch the 9-1-1 emergency number on the telephone dial, the farmer and his family should devise a plan to deal with it, if an accident happens.

When drug companies, several years ago, switched to packaging medications in bottles and vials with safety caps and seals around the necks, a greater peace of mind settled over the consumers, who again felt safe in using them.

The responsibility of the medicine and the vial, once unsealed, however, belonged still to the consumer.

Potentially, if taken in the wrong amount, or given to one who only vaguely understood the directions, the medication still poses a hazard.

The workings of a farm family are much the same. On any day of the week, somebody is around the moving parts of machinery and farm vehicles moving over all types of terrain.

The person is responsible to understand the machine's function and in various situations, his own response to it.

If something gets jammed or malfunctions, instead of taking a moment to consider his action, the impulse to undo it quick and get on with the job, may find someone risking life and limb in the process Stopping the machine, is a nuisance, he thinks, and inconvenient, so while all systems are still engaged he attempts to fix the problem.

Bingo! An injury occurs, possibly at a remote farm site, where, even if he is conscious, his shouts cannot be heard. Hours later, at mealtime or nighttime, when he is missed, a search for him begins.

Just as the bottle of medicine gets its deserved respect, so should farm machinery and equipment have theirs.

Whoever is operating it should possess the physical and mental ability deemed appropriate to the machine's size and complexity. He should understand its risk potential and know how to handle a possible emergency.

These relevant issues were dramatically addressed on June 21 when the Somerset County Cooperative Extension and the Somerset County Ag Education Teachers sponsored Farm Family Safety Day, with a grant from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and the Farm Safety and Occupational Health Advisory Board, to the Somerset County 4-H and FFA.

Accidents with the skid steer were simulated by a team lead by Mac Legault, the agricultural and safety project associate in the Department of Agricultural and Biological Engineering at Penn State.

With him were Aaron Yoder and Hadi Ayagi, graduate students in agricultural safety and health.

Although the skid steer (donated by New Holland) was modified for the demos, Legault emphasized that the machine ordinarily, is designed with safety features and, therefore should not be modified by owners and operators.

If the mechanical lockout device for the hydraulic cylinders is not engaged when the boom is lifted all the way to the top and left there any length of time, the team demonstrated that gradual slippage will occur.

The almost imperceptive downward movement could cause a crushing injury or death to an unaware person working under it, Legault said.

A child runover and adult crushed arm were demonstrated along with tipping on level ground with an operator not wearing a seatbelt, and tipping on slopes.

Legault said that skid steer loads should always be kept low when traveling over any type of ground and the seatbelt fastened across the operator.

He discussed operator's blind spots and how quickly, simply by leaning a hand on the cage and talking with the skid steer operator, another person's distracting presence can lead to an accident.

Four "First on the Scene Farm Safety," certified instructors lead onlookers, step by step, through the first response in a mock accident. In a rusty corn picker, a man (volunteer, Bill Hersch), lay face down, his arm caught.

The four were Bob Brown, Doyle Paul, Melissa Hipple and Martha Ackroyd, who also pretended to be Hersch's mother.

When the crowd saw Ackroyd looking and shouting for her son, then start running toward the machinery where she found him trapped and bleeding, they saw a panicked reaction.

She collected her wife, however, and recalled the "ABC's" — airway, breathing and circulation — of the victim. He was alive and conscious.

When Ackroyd left to report the accident to 9-1-1, she told the dispatcher everything she knew about the patient's condition and gave detailed directions to the location.

"The number one killer in farm accidents is time," she told the eager listeners. "The number two killer is confusion," she said.

Within 10 to 15 minutes sirens were blaring. Flashing red lights of the Berlin ambulance and fire trucks soon were visible on the rise of the narrow country road. Then came the paramedics from Somerset. Rescuers knew that injuries associated with a corn picker could be traumatic amputation, fractures and crushing. Aerial medical transport was needed.

Meanwhile, Brown, Paul, Hipple and Ackroyd continued talking to the group about what to do and not do.

Person should know how to turn off the machine and power take off. Depending on the type of farm accident that that has happened, the wheels should be blocked.

Other accidents are falls, fires, electrical, animal related, vehicle overturns, chemicals, pesticides and confined spaces. Tractors most frequently cause farm accidents with major crush injuries to vital parts of the body.

Whoever reports the accident, should be able to give directions to the scene; know the telephone number from which he or she is calling; know the nature of the accident — entrapment, rollover — the number of victims and their condition — bleeding, heart attack, amputation, shock — the type of aid already given; if someone can meet the emergency medical services; special conditions that could hinder resuce efforts, and not to hang up until the dispatcher has gotten other necessary information.

At Somerset's Farm Family Safety Day, emergency crews will try to extricate a victim caught in a cornpicker.

At Somerset's Farm Family Safety Day Berlin firemen teach the proper use of various fire extinguishers to kids.

Ackroyd hovered around the trained emergency workers as they examined the victim and situation. If there was anyway she could help, she wanted them to tell her so.

Typically, such a reaction might be expected from a bystander, but every second matters when a life hangs in the balance. Ackroyd, therefore, moved aside.

The Berling volunteer firemen explained their gear, the procedure or extricating an entrapped victim with jaws of life and the sundry tools used for successful rescues.

Rescuers should know the parts on a piece of farm machinery and injuries it can cause.

"It can take a-half to one hour to safely extricate the patient," Paul, the Berlin-Brothersvalley Ag teacher, volunteer fireman and ambulance driver, ssaid.

When they got a chance the people eagerly inspected the Connellsville-based helicopter from Fayette County. Actual emergencies kept two other units from responding despite their nearer proximity to the site.

Larry Shober and Reed Miller from the Somerset Rural Electric Cooperative demonstrated the safe use of electricity.

Each time they are put on, the men's hot gloves must first be checked for damage.

"Don't take shortcuts," Shober stated. "You don't get too many second chances."

The power take off demonstration was given by Brown, director of the Somerset County Cooperative Extension and fire extinguisher demonstrations were done by the Berlin Volunteer Fire Department.

One burning question that Dottie Bromley from the cooperative extension office, tried to give guidance about was regarding the age of kids when various kinds of farm chores are assigned to them.

"The first thing we want to stress is each child is unique and each farm situation is unique so it is the parent's job to analyze the situation," Bromley said.

"The key factor is can the child physically operate the machine? Is he big enough and strong enough to physically stop the machine?" Were considerations that Bromley emphasized parents should think about in their decision.

What about a child's ability to assess a situation while operating a piece of equipment or a machine?

"Although the child of 11 to 13 may physically be strong enough and big enough to operate a tractor, they are not ready, mentally, to make quick decisions," she noted. "They are not ready to use the good judgement necessary to operate that equipment."

Bromley said that kind of mental maturity probably won't appear until the youth is 14 or 15 years old.

"Each situation is unique and has to be evaluated," Bromley reiterated.

Hearing and respiratory evaluations were done in the Conemaugh Connection mobile health van.

Somerset Hospital and Occupational Health did blood pressure screening.

Emergency use of the telephone was handled by the Safe Kids Coalition which also provided farm safety handouts and packets.

The video of Farm Family Safety Day is available to watch. One is at the cooperative extension office and a second at the Berlin Fire Department, according to Paul.

County farmers who, ironically, missed the event because the beautiful weather sent them into their fields, will find the video a great asset to watch on a rainy day.

Ozone Gets OK For Food Industry Use

PALO ALTO, Calif. — A panel of experts from food science, ozone technology and other related fields has declared Generally Recognized as Safe (GRAS) status for ozone use in food processing.

The Food & Drug Administration (FDA) allows independent affirmation of GRAS status of substances by a qualified panel of experts. The Electric Power Research Institute (EPRI) requested an independent contractor to review the history and health aspects of ozone for possible use in processing foods for human consumption and for GRAS status.

After an initial meeting with the FDA, an expert panel of six scientists met frequently over the course of a year to interpret and evaluate the history of ozone.

Some of the panel's findings include:

•Ozone has been shown to be a more powerful disinfectant than chlorine, the most commonly used disinfectant.

•Ozone has been used safely and effectively in water treatment for nine decades and has been approved in the United States and GRAS for treatment of bottled water since 1982.

•Ozone has been applied in the food industry in Europe for decades and, in some cases, for almost a century.

•Ozone doesn't remain in water so there are no safety concerns about consumption.

"Ozone is one of the most powerful disinfectants known. There are no toxic byproducts or potential health hazards when properly used as a microbiocide," said Myron Jones, manager of EPRI's Food Technology Center.

Increasing constraints on the use of toxic gases for sterilants or fumigants also makes ozone use more favorable. Ozone is generated for immediate use. So, leaks or spills cannot occur with ozone.

"An onsite ozone generator produces ozone via an electrical discharge. Ozone gas is then mixed with water for washing the food and process equipment. The wash water, called flume water, can be filtered and recycled for reuse — a big environmental benefit," said Ammi Amarnath, former manager of EPRI's Food Technology Center.

Jeff Barach, vice president of research and food science policy with the National Food Processors Association commented, "Ozone is very efficient in killing pathogens and spoilage organisms and its use by the food industry will be welcomed as another tool to ensure the production of safe and wholesome foods."

Additional potential applications for ozone in the food industry include increasing the yield of certain crops, protection of raw agricultural commodities during storage and transit, and sanitizing packaging materials used for food storage.

"While populations increase throughout the world, we are seeing an evolution of new microbiological strains involved in human illnesses. Ozone will help to keep people healthy," said Clark Gellings, EPRI's Customer Systems Group vice president.

EPRI, established in 1973 and headquartered in Palo Alto, Calif., manages science and technology research and development for the electricity industry. More than 700 utilities are members of the Institute which has an annual budget of some $500 million.

It really makes sense if you take a minute to think about it. In winter, your planter is buried behind other equipment in an unheated equipment shed or barn floor. Any questions or problems concerning use of your planter this spring are still fresh in your mind and can be addressed.

Reaching the top is easier if you have the AGCO® Allis 7600 tractor pulling you up.

Make Your Way Up Your Own Corporate Ladder.

The 89 PTO hp engine has the power to muscle through most any job. This multi-purpose, row-crop tractor has a standard synchronized transmission with 24 forward and 12 reverse speeds. For your convenience, you can choose between the cab or rops with an optional canopy.

- A direct air-cooled diesel engine powers the tractor and delivers maximum strength through the full speed range. So you're able to get more work done using less fuel, doing less shifting and requiring less effort to operate the tractor.
- This also lets you match engine power to ground speeds for more efficient field work.
- The AWD models feature true centerline drive shaft for more efficient power transfer and less maintenance.
- Like always, every AGCO Allis tractor comes with a 4-year/4,000-hour warranty that's backed by your dealer.

To see what the 7600 tractor can do for you, just stop by and see us. You'll be surprised at how fast you'll climb.

Gentle GIANT.

When it comes to performance, the MF® 8570 Rotary combine is an absolute giant.

Its patented rotor system lets you harvest circles around other combines of comparable capacity. Yet it produces outstanding sample quality with extraordinarily little grain damage. One reason is its simplicity of design, with far fewer augers, conveyors, and other moving parts than other combines.

Stop in today and find out more about the amazing MF 8570 combine.

Emerging Technology To Be On Displa"

EDGEWATER, Md. — Two examples of emerging ethanol technology will be on display at the 20th annual meeting of the Maryland Grain Producers Association (MGPA) Thursday, July 24, at the Queen Anne's County 4-H Park near Centreville.

Farmers attending the meeting — a total crowd of about 300 is expected — will be able to get "under the hood" of a 1998 Ford Taurus and an elaborately converted Dodge Intrepid.

The Taurus is on loan to MGPA by the Ford Motor Co., partly in recognition of the association's long-standing promotion of the use of ethanol in Maryland. It is designed and built to oeprate on a fuel known as E85, a blend of 85 percent corn-based ethanol and 15 percent gasoline. Ford manufactured 5,000 of the alternative fuel vehicles for 1997 and plans to produce 12,000 for sale in 1998.

The Dodge Intrepid is the pride of a team of about 40 engineering students at the University of Maryland. Designed as an electric hybrid, which draws its initial power from a small ethanol powered engine, it recently returned to Maryland from national competition in the FutureCar Challenge in Dearborn, Mich.

The hybrid components include a one-liter displacement internal combustion engine with sequential multi-port fuel injection running on E85. The engine is coupled with a generator that supplies power to a 100-horsepower AC traction motor that powers the vehicle through the front wheels. A battery pack, located in the trunk, is electrically connected to the generator and the motor and supplies additional energy when maximum performance is requested.

Development of the car by the Maryland students has been supported with checkoff funds through the Maryland Grain Producers Utilization Board. The Intrepid placed eighth in this year's FutureCar competition when a malfunctioning electronic component caused the engine to overheat, but with continued fine-tuning, it's expected to be back in Michigan for the 1998 competition.

The annual MGPA meeting famed in the farming community for the traditional crab feast and chicken and pork barbecue which concludes the event, provides a yearling showcase for research, educational and market developments projects supported by the ryland grain checkoff.

During the course of an afternoon business session, MGPA embers will elect directors and resent their coveted "Man of the Year" Award. The association has more than 300 members representing all segments of the grain production industry in the state.

For more information, either on the annual meeting or on signing up for membership, call the MGPA office at (410) 956-5771. By the way, at the crab feast and barbecue, members eat free.

Protecting Water Quality On Poultry Farms

Most poultry farms depend on wells for their water supply. Having a high quality water supply is essential for a successful operation.

Protecting the groundwater which supplies the well should be a high priority in the management of a poultry farm. Practicing well-head protection techniques and using proper well construction practices will go a long way toward protecting your water from pesticides, nitrates, and bacteria.

Farmers should evaluate the well condition and well construction on the farm to look for potential sources of trouble. One potential source of contamination is abandoned wells. These wells can become pipelines to transport contaminated water from the surface to the acquifer which serves as the source of water for the functioning well.

Any abandoned wells identified on the farm should be properly sealed or filled. The well that is in use should be evaluated to see if its construction adequately protects the groundwater. The well casing and cap should be in good condition with no cracks or defects. The space between the casing and the soil should be sealed with a cement grout from just below the frost line to the bottom of the casing. This will prevent surface water from flowing down beside the casing to the acquifer below. Sealing the casing with a cement grout is one of the most important steps one can take to protect your groundwater.

The well casing should extend through a confining layer or to the bedrock. A confining layer is a layer of clay deposits or other material which does not allow water infiltration or allows water to pass at an extremely slow rate. This layer prevents contaminated surface water from entering the deeper groundwater which typicaly serves as the water source for the functioning well. If the well is not properly cased and sealed, then the borehole simply serves as a conduit for contamination to pass through the confining layer to the groundwater below.

The casing should also extend 12 inches above the soil surface. Installing a concrete pad around the well casing which is sloped to direct surface water away from the well is also a good practice. If the well is on a side of a hill, any rainfall runoff should be directed away from the well.

If a new well is drilled on the farm, choosing a proper location is very important in maintaining water quality. Whenever possible, a site should be chosen which is uphill from potential sources of contamination. These include septic tanks and absorption fields, manure, fertilizer, pesticide, and fuel storage. There should also be a minimum of 100 feet between the well site and septic tanks and absorption fields.

When drilling a new well, enlist a contractor who is equipped to properly case the well as described earlier. It is important that the contractor have the equipment to properly grout the well. The grout mixture should be injected under pressure after the casing has been installed. The grouting should be done at the time of construction since it is more difficult to do it later.

Several self-assessment worksheets are available to help you with evaluating your well condition, construction, and farmstead practices as they relate to protecting water quality. The Pennsylvania Farm A Syst program has developed materials which are very helpful for this purpose. This program is a cooperative effort between Penn State Cooperative Extension, Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection, and USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service.

The Pequea-Mill Creek project also has developed a Environmental Farmstead Evaluation worksheet for this purpose. The Pequea-Mill Creek Project is a joint effort of Penn State Cooperative Extension and USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service.

For more information on these materials, contact the Pequea-Mill Creek Project office at (717) 396-9423.

Glassboro Student Receives Agricultural Scholarship

CLAYTON, N.J. — James Joseph Rambo of Glassboro is the 1997 recipient of the Gloucester County Board of Agriculture Scholarship.

James, a 1997 graduate of Glassboro High School in Glassboro, N.J., is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Rambo of Glassboro. He will be attending Cumberland County College in Vineland, N.J. to study horticulture and agribusiness management.

James was presented the award at the Glassboro High School Day program on June 17 by Douglas Zee, president of the GCBA, board of directors and fruit grower and graduate of Glassboro High School. Zee is owner of Zee Orchards of Glassboro.

Rambo has been working summers and part time at Summit City Fruit Farms in Glassboro the past few years learning about agriculture, pest management and the production of many agricultural crops. In writing his application, Rambo said, "There are so many farmers who have gone out of business, that I think it is important to get a degree in higher education to keep up with all the changes and laws that make life to difficult for farmers in New Jersey. We must find ways to help farmers keep their farms operating."

The Gloucester County Board of Agriculture Scholarship for $2,000 is given annually to a graduating senior who will major in an agriculture area in college and whose family is a member of the 1,300 families of the Gloucester County Board of Agriculture and of the New Jersey Farm Bureau.

Vermeer Unveils 'V' Rake

PELLA, Iowa — Two new wheel rakes, featuring hydraulic fold/unfold and adjustable raking widths "on the go," are available through Vermeer Manufacturing Co.

Vermeer's new WR V-8 and WR V-10 Wheel Rakes feature independent, "floating" fingerwheels that maintain consistent rake-to-ground contact even in hard-to-reach pockets. Crop-driven fingerwheels, built with 40 high-flex steel tines and heavy-duty ball bearings, provide the raking action — eight on the V-8 and 10 on the V-10. Simple mechanical adjustments allow the operator to vary heights and angles for different crops and field conditions. No tools are required.

A hydraulic lift and fold/unfold system allows both models to quickly and easily fold to a narrow 8-foot transport width plus adjust raking widths "on the go." Windrow widths are also adjustable from 3- to 6-feet on the V-10 (3- to 5-feet on the V-8) to match different baler pick-up widths. An optional "center wheel" rake lets you turn hay in the windrow area, ensuring uniform dry-down and fluffy, easy-to-bale windrows. Raking widths on the V-10 range from 20 feet 2 inches to 21 feet 8 inches and 17 feet 4 inches to 18 feet 4 inches on the V-8.

Two new wheel rakes, featuring hydraulic fold/unfold and adjustable raking widths "on the go," are available through Vermeer Manufacturing Co.

Producers Can Be Paid For Flexibility Contracts

DRUMORE (Lancaster Co.) — Producers may get cash from their Production Flexibility Contracts (PFCs), thanks to the passage of the Agricultural Marketing Transition Act legislation by the U.S. Congress in 1996.

Diversified Funding Sources offers producers the opportunity to receive cash from their PFCs to meet immediate financial needs by trading payments from their long-term contracts for a discounted lump-sum cash payment.

Farmers can now act quickly and respond to new financial priorities such as increasing working capital, purchasing new buildings and equipment, as well as farm expansion and debt reduction.

This cash for payments program applies to those producers who enrolled under the FAIR Act of 1996 and thus are eligible to receive payments for the term of their lease or through the year 2002. Anyone who receives payments under this program can apply for a lump-sum cash payment. The contract holder may simply fill out a one page questionnaire in order to receive an offer. There is no obligation and all inquiries are confidential.

The producer may assign all of the payments or only a portion of them depending upon his circumstances and how much money he is trying to raise. The amount of cash paid for payments depends upon the frequency, term, and the amount of payments being sold. There are no charges to the producer — the offer given is net of all fees. Generally, the process takes about 3-4 weeks from the time the offer is accepted. The offer given is based on the minimum payment stated on the contract. If the government pays more than the minimum, the producer receives the difference within 10 business days from an insurance company designated to receive the payments.

Following a purchase of payments, the producer needs to maintain compliance under the FAIR Act of 1996 to ensure the payments are not disrupted. Should the government decide to lower the minimums stated in the contract, the producer is not obligated to make up any short fall in payments. It is possible to buy land and have the purchaser assign any payments due the seller who has qualified for PFC payments and has not already assigned them. The cash received for payments is not a loan and will appear on the balance sheet as income. Tenants may sell only those payments due during the remaining term of a lease through 2002. If a producer has assigned payments and sells his land, he may buy out the contract, or the new owner must acknowledge the assignment.

Breakthrough Benefits Independent Growers

NORTH COLLINS, N.Y. — Renaldo Sales & Service, Inc. has introduced the RTME-1100 Semi-Automatic Transplanter.

The "E" in RTME stands for "Economy" because of a 40 percent decrease in list price over its predecessor, the RTM-1100.

The savings can be directly attributed to the use of AUTO-CAD in the design phase of the project," said Frank Faurling, designer of the RTME.

This event represents for the company the first major design change in the Renaldo transplanter in more than five years. A 30 percent reduction in moving parts was achieved, as well as a substantial savings in labor during assembly because of this streamlining process.

Renaldo Sales & Service, Inc. has introduced the RTME-1100 Semi-Automatic Transplanter.

Fewer moving parts mean fewer adjustments, less maintenance and lower operating costs for the grower. The RTME is also smaller and lighter, which allows it to fit narrow row centers of 60 inches and to be attached by Category II three-point hitch to a tractor running at 45 horsepower.

Maintaining ground coverage of 3,000 to 3,600 plants per hour, per one row unit, the RTME also has the ability to burn holes of various sizes through raised or flat plastic mulch covered beds. Dispersing liquid at precise hole intervals floods the cell and seals it without waste of water or expensive chemicals. In-row spacing from eight to 26 inches is easily accomplished with a simple sprocket change. The new fixed timing feature, even after a spacing change, means that a grower spends less time adjusting and more time planting.

Zeneca Announces EPA Registration Of Fungicide

WILMINGTON, Del. — Zeneca Inc. announced that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has registered Zeneca Ag Products' new fungicide, Quadris™ Flowable, for use on tomatoes.

The EPA registration designated Quadris as a reduced-risk pesticide because it has a more favorable toxicological and environmental profile than currently registered fungicides.

Azoxystrobin, the active ingredient in Quadris, was derived from naturally occurring fungicides, called strobilurins, found in certain species of wood-decaying mushrooms. Quadris has a novel mode of action, controls a uniquely broad spectrum of plant diseases and is active at low use rates. It is highly effective against early blight, late blight, anthroacnose and Septoria leaf spot on tomatoes.

Zeneca will be pursuing additional crop registrations for Quadris during the next few years to expand its product use label.

Cow Comfort Essential To Managing Profitability

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — A profitable dairy is a well-managed one, and managing the herd for optimum cow comfort is an essential component of maintaining profitability. So says Gordie Jones, D.V.M., on managing the herd for optimum cow comfort.

Jones, a veterinarian specializing in dairy-herd performance, nutrition and cow comfort, believes producers owe it to their cows to keep them clean, dry, and comfortable.

"It's convenient to take care of the cows because if we take care of them, they'll take care of us," Jones said.

He said he believes cow comfort is a win-win situation. If a cow is comfortable, then her production will increase.

"Good cow comfort allows for a 30 percent increase in udder blood flow, which in return increases milk production," Jones said.

Jones suggests a few things producers should do to improve cow comfort. First, cows should be encouraged to lay down. For increasing comfort in freestalls, Jones suggests providing adequate lunge space and ensuring that neck and training rails are positioned correctly. Second, increase cow cushion by providing them with four inches of soft bedding, sand, or sawdust. Furthermore, Jones suggests having two water sites available and providing safe, non-abrasive, secure footing.

"Producers should look at the ABCs when looking at their herds," Jones said. "A means by increasing air, cows produce more milk; B is to ensure bunk space is adequate; and C equals comfort, which means making sure the cow is comfortable."

Jones' presentation on cow comfort was highlighted at a recent "Big Future" event sponsored by Protiva, a unit of Monsanto, during the Western Dairy Management Conference in Las Vegas. The event showcased leading-edge technologies and research that will revolutionize the dairy industry in the 21st century.

CuraGen, Pioneer Announce Collaboration

BRANFORD, Conn., and DES MOINES, Iowa — CuraGen Corporation and Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc. (NYSE: PHB) announced the signing of a major gene discovery collaboration. Pioneer will apply CuraGen's proprietary gene expression technology to discover genes responsible for agricultural seed product performance.

"CuraGen's impressive technology will complement and extend our work on genomics research," said Tony Cavalieri, vice president and director of trait and technology development at Pioneer. "Their technology and expertise, combined with our extensive germplasm base and knowledge of plant genetics and molecular biology, puts us in a unique position to identify the specific genes responsible for superior performance in seed products."

"The synergy gained from Pioneer's vast experience in gene-based seed product development will enhance our knowledge and application of gene expression to human therapeutic programs," said Gregory T. Went, executive vice president of CuraGen. "As such, this unique collaboration sets the stage for a broad range of other genomic investigations into areas including protein therapeutics, targets for drug discovery, and new technologies for genomics. We're very pleased that our first major alliance will be with Pioneer, the leader in bringing genomics to agriculture."

Under the terms of the agreement, Pioneer will make a $7.5 million equity investment and will fund research at CuraGen over five years. Pioneer will have worldwide development and marketing rights for seed and agricultural products, while CuraGen will retain rights for human and animal health applications. Each party will receive royalties on the sale of licensed products developed by the other.

In addition, the companies will collaborate on enhancing CuraGen's bioinformatics systems.

Election Of Pork Candidates Set

EDGEWATER, Md. — Maryland Pork Producers Association (MPPA) President Steve Ernst has announced that the election of the two pork producer delegate candidates for the 1998 Delegation Body of the National Pork Board (Pork Act) will take place at 10 a.m. Saturday, August 23.

This election will be held in conjunction with the MPPA board of directors meeting at the Maryland State Fair Grounds in Timonium, Md.

All Maryland pork producers are invited to attend. The National Pork Board determines the manner in which checkoff monies, generated from the sale of pork, are spent. Checkoff funds can be used for promotion, research, and education.

"Pork checkoff funds have been used successfully to promote 'Pork. The Other White Meat.®'," said Ernst.

Any producer who is a resident of the state and has paid all assessments due may be considered as a delegate candidate. For more information, contact Lynne Hoot, Executive Director, (410) 956-5771, or write to MPPA, 53 Slama Road, Edgewater, MD 21037.

MINIMIZING YOUR HERD EXPOSURE TO BOVINE VIRAL DIARRHEA (BVD): VACCINATION ALONE IS NOT ENOUGH

Robert J. Munson V.M.D.
Field Investigation
Center For Animal Health
And Productivity
New Bolton Center

Last month I discussed vaccination, more specifically the use of modified live vaccine in replacements heifers, as one method to reduce exposure to the economic effects of BVD.

There are two other areas that will minimize exposure by decreasing or eliminating the virus from even contacting our herds. These areas are elimination of animals with a persistent infection (PI) with BVD virus and biosecurity. One could raise the question "If I vaccinate my herd, why should I be concerned with biosecurity and eliminating PI animals?"

The problem with BVD is when the virus infects pregnant animals, it crosses the placenta and infects the fetus. This fetal infection is the cause of the developmental abnormalities, fetal mummification, and abortions or persistently infected calves. This ability is thought to be the major way the virus has been able to survive in the cattle population. The fact that no current vaccines make any claim at preventing fetal infection makes biosecurity and elimination of PI animals so important.

We can simply state that current BVD control can be reduced to three key action items: 1. An effective vaccination program, 2. Identification and elimination of persistently infected animals, and 3. Biosecurity.

It is important to understand what a PI animal is and how it relates to the spread and ultimately the control of the virus. A PI animal can be created when a pregnant heifer or cow becomes infected with the BVD virus at a specific stage of gestation (less than 125 days). The immature immune system of the developing fetus does not recognize the virus as being foreign and it tolerates the infection for life. If the fetus is not aborted and is born with the viral infection it is called persistently infected. This PI animal will shed virus (a million viral particles per cc) in all its secretions, including milk for its lifetime. If you are unfortunate enough to own a PI animal, 100 percent of her calves will also be persistently infected because each one will be exposed to the virus at the proper time of gestation to cause the persistent infection.

Most studies suggest that 10-15 percent of our herds contain PI animals and these herds usually have 1-2 percent of animals affected. This small number of animals can have a significant impact due to the large amount of virus they shed. We have several methods to identify herds with a PI animal in the population. A clinical history of abortions together with the birth of deformed calves can lead one to suspect BVD. High antibody levels for BVD in unvaccinated animals or animals vaccinated with killed virus suggest the presence of PI animals. The large amount of virus shed by the PI animal infects herd mates causing elevated antibody levels. If we examine unvaccinated heifers older than five months of age, we can say with a high probability that the presence of a high antibody level is due to exposure to BVD virus. This gives us the opportunity to use these unvaccinated heifers as sentinel animals to detect the presence of a virus shedding PI animal in the herd.

If evidence shows that the herd may contain a PI animal, it is necessary to test every animal in the herd to identify the affected animals. The test to do this is a fairly new, inexpensive and very effective microplate procedure to identify the virus. If a PI is identified, removing that animal from the herd and testing of all replacement calves born over the next nine months is necessary to insure that no other pregnant animals were infected in the first 125 days gestation. The bull calves should be sold at birth, and the heifers tested by one of two procedures. To use the microplate test the calves must have blood taken for testing before they receive colostrum or after four months of age if colostrum is fed.

Maternal antibodies absorbed from colostrum prevent the micropalte test from being accurate, causing the four-month testing delay. If they are not going to be tested until four months of age, they should be isolated from the herd to prevent a potential PI calf from infecting pregnant animals during the waiting period. The standard virus isolation test using white blood cells is an option even after colostrum feeding but is considerably more expensive than the microplate.

Once we have eliminated the virus from the herd we must have a system in place to prevent the reintroduction of the virus. The term biosecurity refers to this system. Isolation and testing of all new purchases, including bulls, is needed to prevent future problems. Any purchase of pregnant individuals requires the testing of both the dam and the offspring with the microplate test. The transportation of animals off the farm requires that no contact with potentially infected off farm animals be allowed. If animals are pastured, good fencing and prevention of contact with neighboring animals should be the goal. Cows and heifers (pregnant 1-4 months) that attend fairs or shows should have their calves examined at birth for persistent infection.

There is no easy solution to this disease and constant vigilance must be exercised to keep a herd free of the virus.

United Ag Services Continues To Grow

HORSEHEADS, N.Y. — J.W. Welch, president of United Ag Services, congratulated its members on its continued growth in 1996. The occasion was the United Ag Services annual meeting at the Holiday Inn in Horseheads.

President Welch pointed out that there was growth both in membership and volume of milk shipped by its members. He also commented on the current depressed dairy economy and his expectation that prices will improve during the year. He pointed out that United members faired better than many dairy farmers because of their quality markets and premium programs.

Guest speaker Edward Gallagher, director of planning and regulatory policy of Dairylea Cooperative Inc., gave a comprehensive talk on the expected changes in the Federal Milk Market Orders and how they will effect farmers. Most likely, the Northeast will finally become a single Milk Market Order leveling the field for all Northeast dairy farmers. He also discussed the deregulation of the electric industry. He stated that Dairylea was working on ways to find cheaper electricity for both dairy farmers and processors.

Peter Fredericks of Federal Order 2 Market Administrator's Office spoke to the group about his activities and desire to work hand in hand with dairy farmers.

James Patsos, CEO of United Ag Services, presented the annual report to the members. United has a positive financial position. United's continued growth has strengthened its position in the marketplace.

United Ag Services is a federation of five dairy cooperatives operating in central and southern New York and north central Pennsylvania. Member cooperatives are Addison Milk Producers, Otselic Valley Milk Producers, Progressive Dairymen, Scenic Mountain Milk Producers and Syracuse Dairy Farmers.

United provides marketing, management, quality control, accounting and payroll services to its member cooperatives and to small and medium sized agricultural organizations.

NOTHING WORKS LIKE A SILO

Sollenberger Silos Corp.

"HI-MOISTURE SHELLED CORN"

You know the advantages of hi-moisture shelled corn versus dry corn for animal feeding. So now consider the many advantages of POURED CONCRETE to store and protect your valuable grain.

"Our 6" thick concrete walls reflect 38% of light beams, resulting in 780 times more heat-resisting ability than steel, and 25 times more insulating power than steel."

"Our 6" thick walls have a very low leak potential compared to pre-fab silos of any kind, and a very low maintenance requirement."

"PROTECT YOUR CORN FROM THE HEAT."

These farmers from Virginia "switched" to our poured concrete silo to store their shelled corn and said: "Even during the hottest summer in our memory, the shelled corn from our poured concrete silo has kept its bright yellow color and has not heated. We have the best hi-moisture corn ever." (Cave View Farm, Inc., Weyers Cave, VA.)

A Safe cleaner that is approved by the EPA-USDA-FDA

There are other soaps that claim to be safe, but they don't clean, they only maintain your system to stay clean if it starts clean. Our cleaner is safe and will clean up dirty equipment and pipeline and continues to clean better & better the longer it is used. Also safe for your drain fields and septics! The cost is very competitive to what you are using now.

76 Cow Total Ventilation System - Denver, PA
Lapp's Barn Equipment can install a high-performance/high efficiency tunnel ventilation system in your barn. A tunnel ventilation system will give you an even air flow throughout your barn of 2-5 mph. Also, a tunnel ventilation system eliminates circulating fans, provides summer and winter ventilation and controls fly problems! An optional unit can even automate your ventilation so you will never even have to worry about it when you're not there, so you can concentrate on other things!
At Lapp's, we sell high quality ventilation systems manufactured by Acme Engineering, Acme products feature such things as:

- Galvanized Construction
- Wide Cambered Propeller
- Rivited Blades
- Unique Captured Bearings
- Vertical Support Frame
- Screens Pre-cut

LLAMAS LLAMAS LLAMAS

If you've been considering starting in llamas, or having a llama for a pet, why not stop in to see our herd.

Our young males start at $500, our weanling females at $2,500, our pregnant females at $3,500. A deposit will hold any of our crias (baby llamas) for you.

We prefer seling off the farm, rather than subjecting our animals to the stress of auctions.

All of our llamas are registered with the International Llama Registry. Some of the finest wool and blood lines can be found in our herd, incuding Otter Creek Harold.

All llamas can be halter led, and are gently trained by teenagers.

—CASH ADVANCE PROGRAM—

Production Flexibility Contracts

If waiting for your Production Flexibility Contract payments is limiting your growth or holding you back on your plans, there is now a solution. The CASH NOW PURCHASE PROGRAM allows you to sell your future contract payments for cash dollars today The flexible nature of the program allows you to:

- Sell all or part of your contract payments depending on the amount of cash you need now. Since this is not a loan, no payments are due directly from you and the cash you receive now does not show up on your books as a loan.
- Repurchase any remaining future payments due, if your needs change later.
- Raise cash, typically within 30-40 days.
- Sell payments on both owned and leased land operations.
- Limit your primary responsibility to remaining in compliance with the Production Flexibility Contract Program.
- Participate in a program that is deliberately designed to allow you full control of your operation. This includes provisions for selling your land, dropping out of the program, buying more qualifying land, and more.

To obtain more information and a written price offer, you need to proceed as follows:

- Contact us. We will send a one page pricing request form. Provide us payment information about your production flexibility contract on the PFC pricing request form. Since we can buy all or part of your contract payments, you need to specify the amount of capital you need now. We will prepare our offer based on your figures.
- Upon acceptance of our offer, we will prepare contract documents for your signature.
- Upon request of the signed contract documents from you, we will request any additional information needed and submit the necessary document to The Farm Service Agency for their acknowledgement.
- Once The Farm Service Agency acknowledgement has been received and other conditions of closing have been met, the agreed upon funds are wired to your account.

It's that simple... To inquire further, call Dick Croyle: toll free 1-888-687-8491 office 717-284-3151 - mobile 717-575-5337.

This Grazier Would Rather Work With Cows Than Equipment

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

KIRKWOOD (Lancaster Co.) — Like a patient bricklayer, Lancaster County Grazier Arden Landis puts in place the pieces needed to convert his dairy to all-organic.

Like many organic dairy farmers, Landis measures the benefits of a better milk check. He weighs the benefits of product marketing.

But first things first.

Those who want to see the benefits of grazing and making the change to grass-based dairying must consider the details. "The pasture has to be treated like a crop as much as a fellow treats corn as a crop," he said.

Late last week, with the help of his wife Caroline, Arden was "making fence" in his field, moving the rotational system so cows could enjoy some fresh grass.

The grass is a complex mix of barcel fescue, fallopia festolium, and ryegrass with clover mixed in. In some spots he has been interseeding with orchardgrass and chicory. Paddocks are arranged in segments measuring from three to 12 acres, and are fenced depending on the feeding rate of the cows.

Landis, president of the Lancaster County Graziers, has been leasing the farm since 1975 from Mrs. Lottie Stoner, Quarryville.

The farm has always been a dairy, according to Landis.

Landis manages about 140 acres at his Kirkwood farm. Of the 140 acres, 125 are in grass and 15 are in woodland and buildings.

Landis milks about 60 cows (increasing to 65 this fall, he said), predominantly Holstein, about 25 percent registered and the rest grade. Landis said an additional 10 heifers will be coming in next spring.

The dairyman tries to get as many cows bred between May 25-July 25 as possible to calve

Considerations For Growing Hay For Competition, Quality

UNIVERSITY PARK, Md. — The key to raising award winning hay is doing everything right and having the fortune to have cooperative weather, according to University of Maryland Extension hay specialist Lester Vough.

Vough is not only a hay specialist and researcher, but he has been and is expected to return as the judge of the Pennsylvania Hay Show, held annually during Penn State University's Ag Progess Days, August 12-14 at Rockspring, near State College.

The samples entered in the contest receive two reviews for judgement.

The first day, the entry samples receive visual and other sensory judgements. Vough looks for a good green color, good odor, leafiness, texture, as well ~~as a lack of~~ steminess and foreign objects.

All the entries receive nutritional analysis and the results are reviewed by Vough and compared with the first day's judgement to come up with the final results in the three section, 30-class hay competition.

Generally, Vough said, the

Although the weather this year was not the greatest for timely hay harvest, (when is it ever ideal?), there was ample opportunity for the production of a lot of hay show quality forages.

Entering forage and grain samples in county fairs, Ag Progress Days, and Farm Show can be an educational and fun activity for all forage producers, young and old.

Most county fairs have agricultural departments that award ribbons and cash incentives for participants. A few of the larger shows will also provide a forage analysis for each entry.

Forages are entered in local and state contests in many different classes. Unlike livestock shows, classes are determined by forage species or percentage of species in the stand. An example would be a class of alfalfa, clover, grasses

Like most things in life, a "Perfect Pasture" does not seem to just drop out of the sky into your field. Rather, it is a result of seeking the best, abandoning the comfortable, and exploring the unknown.

Say what? Seek, abandon, explore? What do these words have to do with establishing a perfect pasture?

To some, they are rather scary words, especially to the farmer who feels most comfortable buying the same mix that his father planted 20 years ago . . . (What's in that mix, anyway?)

If you want to improve your pasture you must do something different. For the only thing that is going to fall out of the sky and grow in your pastures are weeds.

So how does a Pennsylvania farmer get a perfect pasture? Much of the quest begins with in March-April. He uses three bulls, including one Brown Swiss. Altogether, there are 98 animals in the herd.

Landis milks from tiestalls to a pipeline. On DHIA, herd average is 17,000 pounds.

Landis uses New Zealand Holstein AI for his cows. He is increasing his herd size gradually, using his own cow stock. Cull rate is low, at 9 percent. Some of the stock has proved very productive, including milking about 25,000 pounds.

However, "production is not the driving force on this farm," said Landis, a member of the Mount Joy Cooperative.

Because of the cost savings on the grazing farm, using a minimal amount of equipment and raising most of his own feed, Landis said he is making milk at about $2 (feed costs) per hundredweight.

Landis said the driving force on his farm is "keeping costs down and producing milk at low prices."

While many farms are still "corn-silage-based" operations, according to Landis, he decided five years ago to pursue the more management-intensive but less costly route of cows on pasture.

The key is "keeping things simple," Landis said.

Despite not using BST and relying on a complex ration program, on pasture alone Landis said he has one cow that is making milk at 112 pounds per day on pasture using 16 pounds of dried shelled corn and molasses.

Also, Landis hasn't had to rely on the veterinarian a great deal in the past year. There were four emergency visits to the farm, two to help in calving, one milk fever, and one where the cow tried to calve early. Landis performs a reproductive check every six weeks.

The farm is on a spring calving program and all calving is outside. The animals are kept outside and are brought in only to milk or if the heat and cold is too stressful for them.

The animals stay outside in the spring, summer, and fall, and are brought in only during times of extremes, noted Landis.

Landis cleans out the gutters every day and spreads the manure when possible.

"I gave up on silos and TMR mixers," he said. That converts to low overhead and daily hauling of manure. He purchases all the corn he needs at harvest, when the price is generally lower.

Feed in the form of haylage, baleage, and dry has is saved for the winter months. Dry cows receive dry hay and wrapped baleage. He owns his own round bale-making equipment. In addition, Landis has two tractors and a manure spreader. "I'd rather work on cows than fix equipment that breaks down," he said.

Five years ago, when Landis decided to adopt intensive, rotational grazing, he spoke to a friend who farmed conventionally and was doing poorly. The friend converted to grazing and was hooked.

"He convinced me that harvesting grass in pasture is higher in quality and easier with cows than with machinery, and more profitable," Landis said.

Landis, who soil tests every three years and applies lime and fertilizer as needed, grazes each field 6-8 times per season. Cows graze about 1½ acres per day, depending on the quality of the field and the weather.

Grazing has given Landis many benefits. The cows are healthier and the cows are still producing as they get older, he indicated. The herd size was 47 cows more than two years ago — since then it has increased to about 65.

While some claim that conventional dairying "wears cows out," Landis noted, on this program, culling is down to 9 percent and the overall cow health is improved.

Landis is on a program to make his farm organic-based. He is also trying some pastured broilers — making use of "no drugs, no hormones," he said — with 90 broilers per pen. The pen is transportable, acting as a "lawn mower" of sorts in the open field, with a portable basin watering system.

As for the dairy, Landis intends to continue the expansion and to fine-tune the many aspects of grazing. "A lot of different things make grazing dairying more management-intensive than conventional farming," he said. "I love (farming) this way."

Landis farms with his family, including wife Caroline and Johanna, 19; Debbie, 12; Kristie, 10; Sheila, 21; and Joshua, 23.

What's The Disease Pressure Been So Far?

DICK KAUFFMAN
W-L Research

In describing this year's forage production, I would rate it as very good. However, interesting observations have been made concerning disease pressure.

While most alfalfa fields came through the winter very well, I saw significant plant loss due to Sclerotinia crown and stem rot. When conditions are favorable, this disease usually affects fall (August/September) alfalfa seedings only. It kills young seedlings during that first winter.

However, I observed significant plant loss in older stands and no damage in young stands. A few alfalfa varieties with adequate resistance to this potentially devastating disease are only now being introduced to producers.

Rain-free periods were abundant for getting that first cut of hay into storage. The cool temperature and dry conditions in April and May produced alfalfa of extremely high quality, but tonnage was less than normal.

The second cut of alfalfa did not experience ideal conditions. Foliar diseases set in. Lepto leaf spot and Stemphylium leaf spot quickly attacked the regrowth. Small brown spots surrounded by a halo are symptoms of Lepto. Light brown spots which are slightly sunken and often surrounded by a light yellow halo and are much larger than those of Lepto are symptoms of Stemphylium. While these foliar diseases aren't likely to cause any plant death, they will likely reduce yield and quality. Early defoliation results in quality losses and some decline in yield.

Establishing new seedings this spring was relatively stress-free. We were afforded ample time to prepare the seedbed and to get it planted. However there have been reports of thin stands. Dry conditions in April and May, while ideal for planting and getting a lot of fieldwork completed, were not good for young alfalfa seedlings.

What options do you have if your new seeding is thin? I suggest that it be "thickened" by no-till seeding additional seed in August. This should be done immediately following harvest of the existing growth.

There is no need to be concerned about allelopathy on such young seedlings. In the meantime, clean up the weed problems, paying particular attention to rotation restrictions for any herbicides that you used or are planning to use.

How could I give forage production a "very good" rating and then report production problems?

Excellent forage quality, respectable yields, no threatening thunderstorms or rainy periods, no ruts in the fields from machinery or livestock, and being able to harvest on our schedule rather than around the weather all add up to "very good" rating. Keep a good thing growing out there!

QUALITY HAY EQUIPMENT

TO PRESERVE YOUR QUALITY HAY CROPS

10 REASONS YOU SHOULD CONSIDER ROUND BALE SILAGE!

1. High quality forage.
2. Harvest when crop is ready.
3. Reduces reliance on drying time.
4. Lower field losses.
5. Different grades of hay can be kept separate.
6. Low capital investment compared to conventional method.
7. Low horsepower and fuel requirement.
8. Possibility of extra cut, earlier and later in the season.
9. Bales can be sold as cash crop.
10. Better herd health with long stem fiber.

TANCO... The Wrapper That Wraps Bales Other's Won't

10 REASONS WHY YOU SHOULD BUY A TANCO BALE WRAPPER TO DO IT!

1. Five (5) points of support on turntable: Four heavy duty rollers add stability and support to the perimeter of the turntable in addition to the main central shaft. This allows Tanco wrappers to safely wrap the heaviest silage bales on rough or uneven ground.
2. Single solid belt on turntable: The single belt enables Tanco wrappers to effectively wrap misshapen or soggy bales providing a positive surface for bale rotation.
3. Adjustable extendable axle: On trailed models the extendable axle provides a wide, stable wheel base when loading bales. Eliminates the need for counterweights.
4. Top rollers on turntable: Extra rollers provide security to keep bales in place when wrapping at high RPM's (25) or on uneven terrain.
5. Unloading ramp on trailed models: The ramp allows bales to be unloaded gently. When a wrapped bale falls hard it can "burp". Once it "burps" the bale does not re-seal. The ramp gives a smooth transition between the ground and turntable.
6. Optional "High Rise" axle kit for soft ground conditions.
7. Models available to fit every individual need, including machines to wrap big square bales. Tanco was first to build a large square bale wrapper, & continues to produce advancements in bale wrapping technology.
8. Positive bale positioning: While being wrapped, bales are rotated the exact distance required to obtain optimum coverage.
9. Durability: Tanco's subframe is one of the heaviest of any machines available in North America. The low profile design keeps silage bales closer to the ground with a low center of gravity for stability. Tanco's features are the result of years of experience and input from hundreds of individual, and commercial users.
10. Price: From a basic 3 point Model AW250, to the trailed Model AW550 with automatic cut & start, bale and batch counter, and tractor seat controls, Tanco prices are very competitive. Pay less for more features and durability than any other bale wrapper on the market.

DEUTZ FAHR

SILAGE BALING

Firm, well shaped bales of uniform size are easiest to wrap and store. Due to the nature of high moisture hay, the baler must be designed for the task. Although most conventional round balers will make silage bales, premature structural failure, plugging, and inconsistent bale density should be expected after a relatively short time. Optimum bale size is 4'x4'. Larger bales can be wrapped, but due to the extra weight, have a tendency to sag which increases the risk of splitting plastic film. Larger bales also require heavier equipment to handle bales when ready to feed. Both "hard center" and "soft center" balers will work, but the "rope" in the middle of "hard center bales, encourages mold and can result in wasted feed.

A properly prepared 4'x4' silage bale can weigh from 1400# - 1600#. Due to weight and pressure required to exclude as much air as possible, the bale chamber must be designed with extra strength. A heavy duty drive system, consistant density control, and reliable pick-up mechanism are also required.

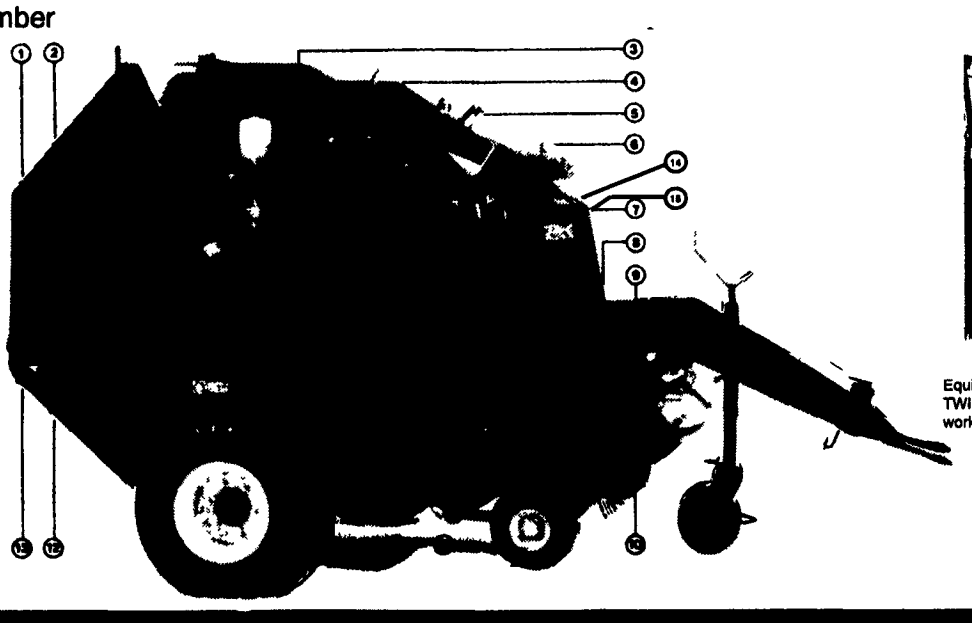
Balers equipped with a built in cutting mechanism are able to increase bale density by up to 20%, and prechopped material can be easily fed.

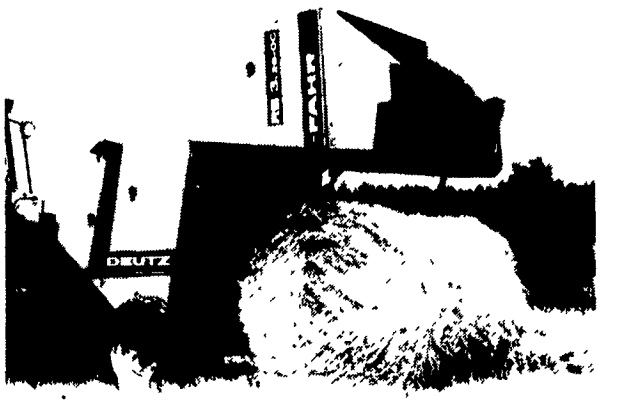
Be sure to use untreated sisal, plastic or nylon twine if you intend to wrap high moisture bales. Treated Sisal twine produces a chemical reaction that will burn through plastic film.

17 Thick walled ribbed steel rollers produce consistent results. Smaller diameter rollers reduce wedging and leaf loss is kept to a minimum. Splined shafts are used on all drive rollers for maximum efficient power transfer.

Special features on DEUTZ-FAHR round balers are why they are able to produce consistent bales year after year of use.

1. Roller bearings mounted on the outside of the bale chamber.
2. Automatic chain lubrication system.
3. Reinforced bale chamber for extra strength.
4. Closely spaced small diameter rollers.
5. Automatic "TWIN-FIX" twine tying system.
6. Netwrap option with a capacity of 270 bales per roll.
7. Easily accessible twine box holding (4) twine balls.
8. Universal drawbar with 16 positions and swivel wheel jack.
9. Adjustable baffle plate.
10. Hydraulic lift pickup.
11. Pneumatic tire pickup gauge wheels.
12. Mechanical tailgate lock.
13. Six bale density settings.
14. Splined drive shafts.
15. Extra heavy drive chain.





Equipped with optional WIDE PICK-UP, OPTI-CUT pre-cutting mechanism, combination TWINE and NET WRAP, the DEUTZ-FAHR RB3200 OC is the ideal machine for custom work or a mixed stand of forages based on the combination of species of forage and the percentage of each in the stand. Show classes are then further divided into cuttings, usually first cutting and latter cuttings. The use of preservatives and/or heat curing also separates forage classes. In addition to hay samples, many fairs have classes for hay and corn silages.

Other articles in this special Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council insert highlight forage shows from the perspective of selecting samples to enter and the judging and evaluation procedure. Why not consider entering a forage show this year at your local fair or at Ag Progress Days? It can be a valuable learning experience and you will have some fun at the same time.

To find out more about entering a local show, check the annual fair catalog for classes and entry procedures.

To enter the 1997 Pennsylvania Hay Show at Ag Progress Days, contact your local County Extension Office for an official entry form. Entry deadline is 10 a.m. Tuesday, Aug. 11. Samples consist of a 6- to 8-inch bale section, from a cured rectangular bale, tied with twine and sent to Dr. Marvin Hall, Department of Agronomy. There is no entry fee and exhibitors may enter as many classes as they wish; however, only one sample per class will be allowed. Unless disapproved by the exhibitor, all contest entries will be stored and exhibited in the 1998 Pennsylvania Farm Show.

So start today to consider selecting one or more of your better hay samples and entering a local or state contest. Certainly at some time during harvest this year, you felt you were producing some really top-notch forage. Why not take a few moments to prepare a sample and join hundreds of other forage producers throughout Pennsylvania and enter a hay show?

Are Natural Parasites Still Doing Their Job?

Franklin Bedard,
Research Entomologist,
W-L Research, Inc.

Biological controls have proven helpful to growers in areas of the eastern U.S.A. where establishment of species of alfalfa weevil parasites are responsible for a decline in weevil populations. When the alfalfa weevil (AW) entered the United States, it did so without the natural enemies that helped to keep it in check in the areas of its originiation. Beginning in 1959, USDA's Agricultural Research Service (ARS) began importing tiny parasitic wasps from Europe to help control AW in the eastern part of the country. Twelve different parasites were imported, but five have become the primary control species within the program.

Alfalfa weevils occur wherever alfalfa is grown. The AW complex causes the greatest insect damage to alfalfa within the U.S. The weevil was accidentally introduced into the U.S. on three different occasions: Hypera postica arrived about 1904 near Salt Lake City, Utah, Egyptian alfalfa weevil near Yuma, Arizona about 1939 and H. postica near Baltimore, Maryland about 1951. The Baltimore introduction was referred to as the "eastern strain," to distinguish it from the population originally known as the "western strain." The faster moving eastern strain met the western strain along a north-south line that passed through Nebraska near the Missouri River. The Egyptian alfalfa weevil remained confined to the southwestern U.S. The three weevils are almost identical in appearance, but seem to be separated by biological differences, with partial reproductive incompatibility reported between the eastern and western strains. Recent genetic studies by Drs. Hsiao and Hsiao in Utah have revealed no chromosome differences among the three weevils. The crossing incompatibility between the western and the other two strains has been shown to be associated with the presence of a rickettsia in the western weevil. These recent findings strongly suggest that there is only one species of AW in the U.S.

In most areas, the AW produces one generation per year and overwinters as an adult. In more southern climates, they may produce eggs before winter, but in northern areas eggs are generally produced only in the spring. The adult female weevil lays several hundred eggs inside the alfalfa stems. The larvae feed primarily on the young developing leaves in the terminal buds of the alfalfa plant. The AW then pupate and become adults by early summer. Many adults then leave the alfalfa fields and remain inactive in protective places throughout the summer.

Alfalfa is the leading crop for hay in the U.S. with 20 to 30 million acres grown annually. Major damage to alfalfa is caused by the larvae feeding. Feeding by larvae and adult weevils can seriously lower yields and the nutritional value of the crop. The greatest abundance of the weevil, and period of greatest crop damage occurs during the first growth of alfalfa in the spring. Under some conditions, the second growth may be retarded. Crop damage late in the season is rare. The crop is most sensitive to AW feeding shortly after it begins growing in the spring.

The parasitic wasps attack and lay their eggs inside the weevil adult or larvae, depending on the preference of the wasp species. When the parasite egg hatches, the young wasp larvae feeds inside the weevil, destroying it in the process. The wasp completes its larval-pupal development in the host and emerges as an adult wasp to seek weevils so as to continue its life cycle. The wasps are quite small: one-sixteenth of an inch to one-fourth of an inch in length, depending on the species. Before the wasps were imported they were extensively screened and tested to make sure they could never become pests themselves. These wasps cannot sting people and only parasitize the AW.

Where the wasps have become established in the Northeast, they have done an excellent job of controlling AW. In these areas where the wasps are plentiful only five to seven percent of the alfalfa acreages have to be sprayed to control AW outbreaks. Some damage occurs to the alfalfa, but as long as the economic threshold for weevil larvae persent is not exceeded, a major loss in yield should not occur. Weevil damage is very conspicuous and small amounts of weevil feeding damage may lead the grower into thinking that insecticides are needed when they are not. Before assuming that a spray application is necessary, a random sample should be examined to determine the true level of damage.

A grower should check the fields with a sweep net every two to four days after weevil larvae begin to appear. Divide each field into four or more sections and take 5 sweeps in each section. Base the population estimate on the average of all sweeps samples taken in that field. Treat the field with a recommended insecticide if the average sweep count is 20 or more larvae per sweep. Instead of using an insecticide, many growers may choose to harvest early, before larval populations reach damaging levels, to minimize killing of predators and parasites. Early cutting may be economically impractical and could further weaken the alfalfa stand. Sweeping does not provide good larval population estimates on young plants or on stubble following cutting. If insecticides are applied only when necessary, parasites are better able to increase in numbers, thereby decreasing the need and expense of future chemical applications.

Parasitic wasps were released into most of the alfalfa growing regions of the United States.

those little things that we sometimes take for granted — the seed. Is there much of a difference or is it just best to buy the same seed that we've been buying? How do I know if there is anything better? Will it work on my farm?

These and many other questions cause hesitation and fear rather than "consumer confidence." After all, most of the seeds look alike and come in similar packages — usually a white 50-pound bag.

• Step 1: Assume that you don't know or have it all — seek out something better. While you are assuming, assume that all the research and years of selection have resulted in improved varieties of seed that will yield better, feed better, and meet your specific needs more direct.

Let's use tall fescue as an example. Maybe you've used a public variety called Kentucky-31. Do you know how it got its name? Kentucky-31 was named after the place and date of its origin. That's right! It was discovered in 1931 in the foothills of Kentucky.

Now wouldn't you think that 66 years and hundreds of thousands of dollars of research would generate at least one or two improved tall fescue varieties? Of course! And it has. In fact, there are improved varieties from all around the world. Fawn from Oreon, Advance from New Zealand, Puego from Holland, and many more. By the way, most of the newer forage tall fescues don't have a lick of toxic endophyte in them. So I ask, why is it that when it comes to choosing a new tall fescue, why do you choose Kentucky-31? Price, right? Well, you get what you pay for. No more. No less.

Then there's ryegrass. My what a difference the new varieties are from the old Lion perennial ryegrass. Today, you can get endophyte-free tetraploids that not only yield, but provide an unbelievably high feed value. With relative feed values (RFV) exceeding 135 you can be assured that your animals will be gaining as they are grazing. Survivability has been a downfall for ryegrass, but recent tests have shown that some varieties, like Tonga tetraploid perennial ryegrass, are also very persistent. Combination of annual, intermediate, and perennial ryegrasses are now being used with great success, too.

The choice continues in the orchardgrasses. Did you know that there are four different types of orchardgrasses? Some are best for hay while others are ideal for pasture. Take a dwarf variety like Tekapo or Wana orchardgrass from New Zealand. This type of orchardgrass is s site and a wonder to anyone who has only been accustomed to the traditional upright varieties like Latar and Potomac. These new dwarf varieties LIKE to be grazed. They DON'T get clumpy. They DO fill in. I have seen Tekapo plants with a nearly two-foot diameter base. These varieties have very low, protected crowns that can withstand intense grazing. Down to the nub chomping, I call it.

Now here's where one of your biggest dilemmas comes into play. How do you find out about all these new varieties? The Book of Proverbs says that there is wisdom in a multitude of counselors. I like to hear a story at least twice before I open my wallet. Gather information in a multitude of ways. Do some independent research; explore the internet; go to educational seminars, grazing conferences, and trade shows; make friends with progressive locals (you know, the weird ones who are always trying something new!); and finally, listen to salespeople who seem to have done their homework. Also, subscribe to pasture related journals, like the Stockman Grass Farmer.

Currently, my favorite tool is the internet. I am on a newsgroup called Graze-I, I regularly search out university and private sites, and I use the internet to provide information to my customers via our company web site. This resource is amazingly unlimited.

One caveat. Probverbs also states that only a fool listens to everyone. Don't take all advice as gospel.

• Step 2: Walk, don't run — make small changes. Best to compare old with new and new with new. Remember Step 1? Assume that you don't know everything about this new variety that you are planting. When you plant it, try a few different combinations.

Take seeding rates, for example. Oregon State University has recommended that 1 seed per every square inch is a good rule of thumb to use when planting new pastures. Using this recommendation, one simply needs to know how many seeds per pound the new variety averages, what percentage of the final mix he wants to have of that component and do the math. (By the way, there are 6,272,640 square inches in an acre.) However, when you start to mix varieties, some species can dominate others. And, like all rules of thumb, not every situation or variety fits perfectly. So it is a good idea to try a few different combinations.

This is a good rule for not only buying new pasture grass varieties, but for many other activities. Do you have a new vendor knocking at your door? It doesn't hurt to try them out in a small way, but don't go and abandon every other relationship you've developed just yet.

New processes and procedures, technologies, and tools are the same way. Go to the most skilled craftsman you know and ask him how he got to where he is today. Assuredly, he will tell you that he kept working at his trade, perfecting and refining. Look at all you do on your farm the same way. Perfect your pasture management a little more each day. Try seeding a new variety in one section. Apply fertilizer a couple of different ways. Turn at least part of your farm into a mini experimental station.

• Step 3: Get on a routine of regular pasture improvement. Similar to Step 2, but different in focus. If a farmer can get committed both mentally and financially to improve his pastures each year, he will indeed be successful. He who gathers a little at a time will accumulate great wealth, says the Book.

This principle applies well to farming. When we fail to maintain our fields, our equipment, even our relationships, they all seem to naturally fall apart. Better to be committed to regular maintenance and improvements than to wait for the pasture to become a wasteland. Set aside funds on a regular basis to be used to purchase an annual amount of seed for reseeding. Have a seed budget, just like one for fertilizer and equipment repairs. A few hundred dollars each year will most likely yield a rapid return within the year, but non-budgeted seed usually doesn't get bought.

• Step 4: Get on a routine of regular mental improvement. As a farmer, you are competing against other farmers. In today's farming, you must be knowledgeable. Don't think that you can be successful tomorrow on today's smarts. Make friends with other successful operators, attend grazing conferences, field days, and other educational events on a regular basis.

Also, spend your money buying from informed and informative suppliers. I recently bought a sign that now hangs in our office. It reads, "Price, Quality, Service. Pick Any Two." Remember that when you purchase products from suppliers that are trying to help you, you are investing in your future. These are the folks you want to keep in business. Especially with today's mergers and buyouts, many companies are becoming mass merchants. Support the guy who sells you and GIVES you information — even when his price is higher.

We all want "Perfect Pastures." We'd like perfect marriages, perfect kids, and perfect farms. And just as it is with the rest of life, the only way to have a perfect pasture is to perfect our pasture. If we do nothing, then all we have is what we have . . . except for a few weeds that might blow in.

Considerations For Growing Hay

ranking of the entries done during the first day correlates to the ranking of entries by test.

However, there are exceptions. A sample of hay may look, feel and smell great, but have virtually no nutritional value, while a slightly sour-smelling, sun- and rain-damaged sample may contain a superior blend of nitrogen, carbohydrates and acid-detergent and acid nuetral fibers.

That happens, Vough said, and generally there aren't very many good explanations for why the abnormal occurs.

But it doesn't happen often enough to negate the general relationship of hay's nutritional quality and its sensory qualities.

"The main thing I'm looking at, from a visual assessment standpoint, is stage of maturity, leafiness, color, foreign material and odor and condition," he said.

Cutting in the morning after the dew dries, getting a quick dry down, achieving a low moisture condition and harvesting before the leaves get brittle may take some experience to become familiar with the timing of events, but with attention to detail, and confidence derived from learning through education and experience, consistently high quality hay can result.

There are basics to raising hay that constitute a foundation from which the finer points of raising top quality hay are built.

Rather than discuss some of the considerations that can go into producing hay show samples, Vough said concentrating on producing quality forages from long-lasting stands should be the goal.

One of the most obvious considerations is field selection. There are only so many "ideal" fields in the world and they don't come with every farm.

To optimize growth of any cultivar, a field should provide not only basic plant survival requirements, but ideal requirements.

"In field selection, I would prefer to put alfalfa on the best soils of the farm," Vough said.

"South facing fields will generally develop faster, but you don't have to be limited to south-facing slopes," he said. "(Plants in fields with a southern exposure) will usually start growth earlier in spring than on a north slope, but the south-facing fields also tend to dry out faster in summer."

Vough said he likes to see soils that have good depth, are well-drained and have good fertility for alfalfa production.

"Alfalfa is not adapted to poorly drained soils," Vough said. "It will not persist. None of the crops will do well on shallow, droughty soils, but alfalfa has a much higher yield potential than what we typically get in the Mid Atlantic region.

"I think some of it has to do with field selection," he said. "Alfalfa tends to get planted on marginal soils. In some cases fertility is a factor."

Alfalfa does require a high level of fertility, he said, with pH and potash being most important, especially as a producer intensifies management.

According to Vough, if a producer is on a three-cut per season system, the soil fertility isn't as critical as those who manage for five cuttings per year.

Of course, the basics of production includes having soil tests taken and then providing the limiting nutrients to achieve reasonbly extected optimum production.

Vough said that, historically, it was not recommended to spread manure on alfalfa, out of the consideration that the plant is a legume, capable of producing its own nitrogen.

That may change in the near future, as a result of trials involving the use of manure on top of mixed alfalfa-grass fields.

"There is the potenital to utilize the nutrients in the manure with alfalfa-grass mixtures," he said, adding that the plants will primarily benefit from the potash, but that alfalfa will also utilize the nitrogen "very well if it's there."

The pH (which is a measure of free hydrogen) is likewise important to maintain, he said.

"Once the pH drops below 6.5, I would suggest top dressing lime. There is data to indicate that when pH drops below 6.5 it definitely has an affect on yield."

Harvesting is also key for consistent production of top quality hay.

He said harvesting at the appropriate stage of maturity is the most important consideration.

For alfalfa, except for the first cutting, he said to cut it in the late bud/early bloom stage.

The first cutting should be done before bloom, actually in early bud stage, because the first blooms of the season arrive one to two weeks later relative to the maturity in the rest of the plant. Therefore the fiber content is much higher and the quality lower in first cutting.

Ideally, first cutting hay should be some of the best, with summer hay being worst.

He said that in the Southwest United States the spring and fall cuttings are usually of dairy quality, while the summer cutting are more likely to be sent to the stockyards.

Orchard grass should be cut in late boot to early heading stage to get prime quality without affecting standability.

Timothy however, should be cut when fully headed for a very important reason — the plant stand will have a better chance at surviving and overall production.

As with orchard grass, the best quality Timothy would also be cut during the late boot/early heading stage, but Timothy is "sensitive" at that point, Vough said.

If cut before fully headed, Vough said the regrowth of

BOOST SILAGE MILEAGE

CHEMGRO SI2000

Making great silage and haylage isn't easy. You have to beat the weather, the natural ups and downs of good and bad crop years, mold, and spoilage. Then you have to worry about what it cost you to feed silage for the value you received.

Chemgro silage inoculants SI 2000 and SI 2000ws can eliminate a lot of the guesswork. Designed to allow you to choose dry or water applications, either products will add quality and silage mileage no matter what your crop.

You get fast-dropping ph, rapidly-rising lactic acid production, and quicker fermentation than you find in both untreated silage or crops treated with other inoculant brands.

The result is silage that is more palatable for the cows, higher in total nutrients, and that contains more total digestible dry matter - a higher return on your investment.

Call us today to find out more about Chemgro SI 2000 and SI 2000ws silage inoculants and applicators.

Several Factors Influence Forage Quality

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Six major factors affecting forage quality (not yield), ranked by their impact on forage quality, include 1) maturity, 2) crop species, 3) harvest and storage, 4) environment, 5) soil fertility, 6) variety. The relative importance of each of these factors, along with some exceptions to the rankings, are described below.

1) Maturity (harvest date). Maturity is the most important factor affecting forage quality. Forage quality is never static — plants continually change in forage quality as they mature. As plant cell wall content increases, indigestible lignin accumulates. In fact, forage plant maturity changes so rapidly that it is possible to measure significant declines in forage quality every two or three days.

2) Crop species. Differences in forage quality between grasses and legumes can be very large. The protein content of legumes is typically much higher than that of grasses, and legume fiber tends to digest faster than grass fiber, allowing the ruminant to eat more.

3) Harvest and storage. Improper harvest techniques can seriously reduce forage quality, primarily through the loss of leaves. Storing a hay crop at an incorrect moisture content, or improper ensilaging of a forage crop, can dramatically lower its quality.

4) Environment (climate). Moisture, temperature, and the amount of sunlight influence forage quality. Rain damage is very destructive to forage quality. When bad weather delays harvesting, the forage crop becomes more mature and hence lower in quality. High temperatures may increase lignin accumulation and decrease quality, but drought stress may actually benefit quality by delaying maturity.

5) Soil fertility, Soil fertily affects forage yield much more than it does quality. While it is possible to produce high quality forage on poor, unproductive soils, it is generally very difficult to produce high yields of high quality forage with an unproductive soil resource. Proper soil phosphorous (P) and potassium (K) levels help to keep the desirable legumes in a mixed seeding and also reduce weed problems. It is necessary to balance soil fertility to avoid mineral imbalances in ruminants. Low soil fertility, as well as very high fertility, has resulted in reduced forage quality.

6) Variety (cultivar). After decades of breeding forage for yield and persistence, attention has recently been focused on developing or identifying varieties with improved quality. Variety or cultivar can affect forage quality but not as greatly as the other five factors, in alfalfa, selection for improved quality is under way by most commercial companies, and several U.S. firms have initiated selection in corn silage hybrids for improved forage quality.

There are several other lesser factors that can influence forage quality. Weeds can negatively affect quality, especially in the case of noxious weeds. Insect pests can lower forage quality, particularly if they cause significant leaf loss. Plant diseases can affect quality when they result in a shift in the species present and when they promote early leaf death. Usually, however, diseases and insects have their greatest impact on yield and persistence of forages.

Putting Forage Quality Into Perspective

What is forage quality?

Fluctuations in milk prices, feed costs, and government programs are forcing dairy farmers to become more efficient with their farm operation. Since feed accounts for approximately one-half of the total cost of producing milk, and high quality forage optimizes the productivity of the animals, increasing the quality of forage available is one of the best methods of improving overall feeding efficiency. To effectively produce high quality forage, it is necessary to understand what forage quality is and to keep the factors influencing forage quality in perspective.

Forage quality is defined as the sum total of the plant constituents that influence an animal's use of the feed. Along with its quality, the overall potential feeding value of a forage feed is influenced by the form in which it is fed (i.e., particle size), the palatability of the forage and by the quality of other feeds in the ration.

What is quality forage worth?

In a recent study with three hays of low, medium, and high quality, along with corn silage and a mixed feed grain were used to balance a ration, total feed cost for the high quality hay ratio was $0.11 less per cow per day than the medium quality hay ration. Income over grain cost is $0.45 more per cow per day for the high quality hay ration than for the medium-quality hay. For 100 cows over a year, this difference is greater than $16,000. Low quality hay does not allow an animal to consume enough digestible energy to be highly productive.

What determines forage quality?

All forage plants are composed of cells having a fibrous cell wall for support and protection. Inside the cells are several soluble compounds, most of which are highly digestible. Since cell wall material is the primary constituent of forages, one of the main objectives of forage analysis is to characterize the cell wall fiber.

Plant fiber has three major components: cellulose, hemicellulose, and lignin. Cellulose and hemicellulose are digestible to some extent by ruminants. With the help of microbes in the gut, ruminants can convert these fiber components into energy. Lignin is indigestible and cannot be converted, even by ruminant microbes.

Both grasses and legumes have two main plant parts, leaves and stems. Stems usually contain more fiber for plant support. Leaves, on the other hand, provide a means for the capture and use of energy from sunlight and tend to be lower in fiber content. For this reason the proportion of leaf to stem in a given forage sample directly relates to its forage quality.

Physical appraisal based on sight, smell, and touch can provide some general information on what is forage quality. However, chemical analysis is needed to more correctly assess the economic potential of a forage.

At a recent forage meeting, approximately 80 forage producers and industry representatives were asked to rank four bales of hay by a visual appraisal of their forage quality. The hay ranged from alfalfa to an alfalfa-grass mix. An objective quality evaluation of the same bales, based on Relative Feed Value (RFV), found considerable differences among them. There was no consistent pattern in the ratings by individuals but, in fact, the bale judged best on the basis of appearance had the lowest RFV of the four samples. Clearly, objective forage analysis is required.

Finally, chemical analysis. The most common system used to determine forage nutritive values is called the Van Soest Fiber Analysis System. This system separates feeds into distinct fractions that relate to their nutritive value. Neutral detergent fiber (NDF) consists of the total fiber in the forage and relates negatively to forage intake by ruminants. Acid detergent fiber (ADF) is composed of highly indigestible fiber and relates negatively to forage digestibility. Total nitrogen concentration in the forage (usually expressed as crude protein) is also a useful measure, since adequate intake of nitrogen is essential for animal productivity.

Forage laboratories analyze samples for NDF, ADF, and total nitrogen. It is also possible to accurately estimate these components using near infrared reflectance spectroscopy (NIRS). Other estimates of forage quality, such as total digestible nutrients (TDN), net energy of lactation (NEL), and relative feed value (RFV) are derived from mathematical manipulations of NDF and ADF values.

Visual Evaluation

• Stage of maturity. The stage of plant maturity at harvest influences quality more than variety, production location, soil fertility, or seasonal influences. Alfalfa hay harvested in the vegetative (prebud) stage of maturity will have the highest nutritive value for livestock.

Factors Influence Forage Quality

Maturity at the time of cutting also makes a great difference in palatability and digestibility. Both the acceptability (palatability) and the feed value (digestibility) decrease as the crop matures (from vegetative to full bloom stages). You'll have to make some compromises, however, between highest quality and highest yield.

Early-cut hay (prebud stage) will not produce as much as late-cut hay (½ bloom stage), but early-cut hay will produce more digestible nutrients than late-cut. On a yearly bases, early-cut hay will yield as much digestible dry matter per acre as later-cut hay.

Early-cut hay makes a more desirable feed because it contains more digestible material, is more palatable, and is eaten in largre quantities by livestock. If you use early-cut hay, you'll need less supplementary protein and energy feeds than you will with later-cut hays.

• Leafiness. Leaves contain highly digestible energy and at least two-thirds of the protein found in hay. Loss of leaves, because of plant maturity or leaf shatter during raking and baling, greatly reduces hay quality. Thus the percentage of leaves remaining in the bale is an important indicator of hay quality.

• Color. Bright green color is a good indicator of proper curing (for alfalfa), good palatability, and high carotene content (carotene is converted to vitamin A). Any change from a bright green color indicates a loss in feed value. However, hays that have been slightly sun-bleached or have had a small amount of rain damage will still make high-quality feed.

• Foreign material. Weeds and straw have little or no feeding value. Wire can injure livestock when they swallow it. In general, foreign material reduces palatability, which means lower intake.

• Odor and condition. The smell of new-mown hay is your standard. Any other odor, such as musty or putrified (rotten), indicates lowered quality. The causes are excessively high moisture content, or weather damage. Odor problems generally mean lowered livestock acceptability.

Dustiness also detracts from the value of hay. Don't feed dusty or moldy hay to horses or dairy cows. You may use it in maintenance rations for beef cows.

Is Intensive Grazing More Profitable?

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Recent research conducted by Aziz Elbehri and Steve Ford at Penn State University addressed the commonly asked question about profitability of intensive grazing. Here is what they found.

1. Assuming equal milk production (18,000 pound/cow/yr) they reported that 7-yr annual average net cash income for farms with intensive grazing increased by 14 to 25 percent compared with similar farms without intensive grazing. For a typical Holstein dairy farm with a 60-cow herd, this mean $8,400 to $12,400 more in annual net cash income.

2. Farms using intensive grazing were at less financial risk compared to nongrazing farms under the assumption of equal milk production. Milk production on grazing farms could only drop from 4 to 6% before they experienced the same risk level as nongrazing farms. Crop mixtures on nongrazing and grazing farms greatly affected risk levels.

They concluded that economic gains associated with intensive grazing require good managerial ability, including efficient and cost effective feed use as well as the achievement of high milk production goals.

Here Is How Forage Grasses Develop

PAUL CRAIG
Dauphin County
Extension Agent

The ultimate goal of all grazing programs is to provide sufficient forage to maximize the grazing animal's forage intake while maintaining that forage stand. Good grazing management provides high yields of quality forage feeds for extended periods of time. To accomplish this goal, a grazier must understand certain basic plant growth principles.

Although grazing management practices will vary by plant species and environmental conditions, there are basic agronomic principles that must be followed in order to establish and maintain profitable pastures. Failure to follow these principals will cause a shift in profitable pasture sward production to less productive stands, resulting is reduce forage intake and decreased animal performance. These principles involve plant growth response, plant energy production, sunlight interception, stored energy site, and rest periods.

• Plant growth response. The pasture sward is comprised of individual tillers or shoots. Although each tiller is an individual, the sward is managed as one unit. Tillers are comprised of a growing point, stem, leaves, roots, nodes, and dormant buds. The dormant buds are found at or below ground level, at stem nodes, and on rhizomes and stolons. Dormant buds have a growing point that has the potential to produce new tillers. Tillers produce leaves until the growing point is triggered to become a seedhead. Once the seedhead is initiated no new leaves will be formed on that individual tiller and all new leaves must come from new tillers formed from buds. The total number of buds that can be found in a sward is dependent on plant energy status.

• Plant energy. Plant energy is produced in green leaves by photosynthesis. Plant roots are also important in the process for the uptake of water and minerals, but the key factor is green leaves. This plant energy is used for growth or stored for later use when plants have few green leaves. As leaves get larger, photosynthesis increases dramatically, allowing for rapid growth. Once flowering begins, growth rates slow down and most energy is diverted to flower and seed production.

• Sunlight interception. Graziers cannot affect the amount of sunlight that controls plant growth rate but they can affect the leaf canopy by grazing height. By allowing swards to get too tall, upper leaves shade out shorter tillers and reduce overall growth rates, tiller survival, and feed quality. When stands are grazed too short, not enough leaves remain to intercept light to maximize growth rates. Consider your lawn and how short frequent mowing results in a thick stand with many tillers filling in open spaces.

• Stored energy location. When leaves are removed from a sward by harvesting or grazing, the new growth depends on stored energy in the plant to initiate new tiller formation. The greater the stored energy levels, the more rapid the rate of regrowth will be. Commonly called root reserves, this stored energy is usually found in the lower stem base (0 - 4 inches) on grasses, in addition to rhizones and stolons. Knowing where these reserves are located is important because this determines the optimum grazing height.

• Rest periods. Good managers balance pasture quality with yield and plant growth. Highest plant quality is found when plants are the youngest: however, continually harvesting or grazing when plants are young will deplete plant reserves, leading to a weakened stand that becomes successively weaker with each grazing. Eventually the grass plants die and the pasture plant population shifts to other less productive species. To ensure long-term success, forage plants need rest periods to replenish plant reserves so they can initiate new growth to form new leaves to rebuild plant energy reserves.

In order to maintain a profitable livestock or dairy operation, the production of forage feeds must be successful. To ensure long-term success, graziers must understand four factors and how these factors relate to plant growth response and the effect on pasture longevity:

1. Know when the pasture canopy is ready to harvest
2. Know how much stubble height to leave
3. Know how long it will take to reduce sward height to the ideal stubble height
4. Know the animal stocking density needed to allow quick removal of pasture canopy.

JOHN DEERE

timothy is affected. He said the plant is not in a regenerative or growth phase when cut at that stage and regrowth will be slow. It will come back much better if cut at fully headed stage.

"From a quality standpoint, it's better if cut in late boot, but for maintenance of stands, it can result in the loss of stands. So, unless you are growing for competition or a hay market that pays a premium to offset the loss in regrowth, it's probably better to wait until fully headed."

Clover, he said should generally be cut in the early bloom stage, about 10 to 25 percent bloom..

When the first flowers are noticed is a good time to cut, he said. He said "first flower" stages equates to about 10 percent bloom.

The best way to determine 10 to 25 percent bloom is to mark off a measured area and count plants in bloom.

"What frequently happens is that growers tend to underestimate maturity, the percentage of plants in flower," he said.

He said one grower he knows of had lower quality, but maintained that he harvested at 10 percent bloom. The next year showed that the producer's estimate of a 10 percent bloom stage was actually about 50 percent.

The real world applications of all these recommendations comes down to what nature will allow.

"For a first cutting, I generally operate off of a calendar date. If you're waiting for that late bud to early bloom to make a cutting, you're probably two weeks late," he said.

"After first cutting, you can go by the stage of bud or flowers."

Vough said that a review of 30-year weather patterns was done to see if there was anything to the farmer-observance that the first cutting of hay should be done the first or second week of May.

Vough said the results of weather history shows that (in central Maryland) a dry period usually occurs from May 5-11 so that correlates to first cutting. "When I start first cutting, you will barely be able to feel buds in the tips of the plants," he said.

It generally rains for the next three weeks, and if the crop stays out, the quality is lost.

It is generally then dry again from about June 9 through June 15, and then is wet again.

The maturity difference between central Maryland and south central Pennsylvania is about a week or less, depending on local conditions.

Vough said he prefers late summer seeding to start a stand of alfalfa, because there fewer weed problems and you can get a stand at full harvest the following year.

However4, there are probably more spring seedings made in the Mid Atlantic area than later summer seedings, primarily because of the lack of adequate moisture. Spring is a good time for moisture, but also for weed growth.

But research has shown a way around that.

"The best method for establishing alfalfa is to no-till it in small grain stuble of barley or wheat," Vough said.

Since those grains are usually harvested in late June or early July, there is a month to six-week period to allow moisture levels to build beneath the crop residue.

"We have a month to six weeks to accumulate moisture and then make seeding in late August or early September."

Another consideration, Vough said, is to allow a 55 to 60-day regrowth between August and October.

Some producers are risking their alfalfa stands, however, by taking a mid to late September cutting and then taking that six to eight inch regrowth. Vough said that last regrowth comes from the roots and will debilitate the overwintering capabilities of the stand. It can also leave the plants more susceptible to disease.

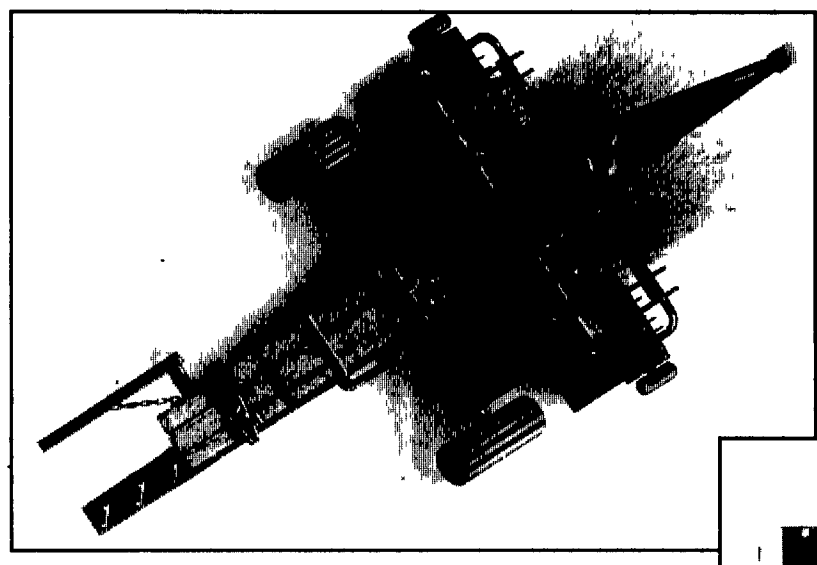
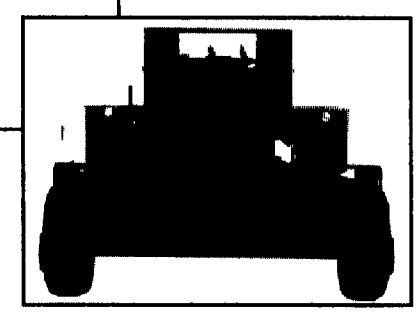
CENTER-LINE BALERS





Straight-through Hay Handling Saves Leaves and Nutrition

Hay moves in a straight line from pickup to kickout, so a finished bale contains more high-protein leaves than a bale from a side chamber baler.
